Wanted: Community volunteers

By KATIE PERTTUNEN
kperntunen@yourdailyglobe.com

MERCER, Wis. — Local organizations gathered at the Mercer Community Center Saturday to seek volunteers for both the long term and for specific projects.

The American Legion Post 424, serving Mercer and Manitowish Waters, is seeking volunteers to speak at Mercer School's Veteran's Day program. They are judging essays submitted by 14 students, "a daunting task, considering that this year's batch were all wonderful," said member Tom Leidenheimer.

The legion is also seeking volunteers for its Memorial Day program, to speak, sing or put flags on grave sites.

A lot of help is needed with the July 4 Run for a Veteran event, especially with trail cleaning, signing up runners, and assisting on race day.

Volunteers are also needed at the VA Clinic and at the Camp American Legion. Funeral assistance is needed for deceased veterans. For more information, contact Leidenheimer at 715-476-2759.

Commission to tackle blight again

IRONWOOD — The Ironwood City Commission will continue its blight fight with four public hearings before today's 5:30 p.m. regular meeting.

The hearings begin at 5:10 p.m. on blight violations at 148 W. Pewabic St., 226 W. Arch St., 1216 Celia St. and 507 Lake St.

The hearings are planned for five minutes apiece.

During its regular meeting, the commission will consider action on those parcels and also one at 319 Albany St. That parcel was reviewed a previous city commission meeting.

Commissioners will also consider approving a resolution authorizing the use of snowmobiles on designated streets and alleyways. The snowmobile map approved by commissioners is nearly identical to a year ago.

Ironwood Public Safety Department Director Andrew DiGiorgio told commissioners at the last meeting that the biggest change in the new map is opening the trail from Lake Street to the Holiday Station, where the machine owners buy fuel.

Another change is access on Lawrence Street will be closed, but trail access is available on routes near there.

LCO tribe members plan winter camping at mine site

UPSON, Wis. — Lac Courte Oreille Band of Lake Superior Ojibwe members plan to occupy five acres of forested land near the proposed Gogebic-Taconite mine through the winter.

The LCO has made the decision to continue the camp, called the LCO Harvest Educational Learning Project, despite no agreement having been reached with Iron County, according to Wisconsin Public Radio.

Tribal member Paul DeMain said camp members are winterizing by double-walling and insulating wigwams.

DeMain said it's important to stay there because he believes G-Tac might conduct rock-sampling this winter and a geoscientist found asbestos-like fibers there.

Tribal members were at the camp site all summer, although county forestry rules only allow two weeks of camping there.

LCO (Hayward area) Tribal Chairman Mic Isham said the tribal members are researching maple syrup harvesting and plants and resources. He said it's a research project and not a camping expedition.

Isham said he hopes to come to an agreement with Iron County.

Gasoline prices continue to fall across Gogebic Range, nation

By RALPH ANSAMI
ransami@yourdailyglobe.com

Gas prices have continued to plunge on the Gogebic Range, with the lowest price locally for a gallon $3.25 on Saturday in Hurley.

That was quite a drop from summer prices around $4 a gallon.

The Hurley gas price was below the nationwide average of $3.305, according to gasbuddy.com.

The cheapest U.S. gas on Saturday was $2.968 for a gallon in Missouri, while the most expensive was $4.085 in Hawaii.

In Michigan, the lowest cost for a gallon was $3.02 in Lambertville, while the highest was $3.79 in Romulus.

For Wisconsin, the statewide average was $3.265, compared to $3.443 a year ago.

Mercer stood at $3.39 a gallon Saturday. What's ahead?

If last winter is any indication, prices could fall more. For example, last January, the Wisconsin average for a gallon of gas had fallen to $3.152.

With the recent winter-like weather across the Gogebic Range, one way motorists can save on gas mileage is to keep tires properly inflated.

It's not unusual for tire pressure to drop by 3 or 4 pounds per square inch in cold weather. Gasbuddy.com notes a tire under-inflated by 2 PSI increases fuel consumption by 1 percent.

Also, not braking hard, nor accelerating rapidly can increase fuel economy by as much as 20 percent.

Using cruise control over long trips is another way to improve mileage and shutting off the car, rather than having it idle for long periods during winter months, also saves on trips to the pump.

BESSEMER — The Gogebic County Relay for Life will conduct a planning meeting Nov. 7 at 6 p.m. at the Bessemer VFW for the 2014 event.

According to relay member Carole Lillar, the group is looking for teams, volunteers and committee members.

"We're looking for everybody," Lillar said, "anyone is who willing to participate."

According to Lillar, many past members and volunteers have enjoyed the experience.

"You come to the event once, and you're hooked," Lillar said. "That was my story. I went to relay one time, and then I was on a team,

NJ Governor Christie blames aid delay on DC

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Chris Christie says he understands victims' frustrations a year after Superstorm Sandy but maintains that his administration isn't to blame for delays in aid reaching victims.

In an interview with The Associated Press as the anniversary of the Oct. 29 megastorm approached, Christie blamed Congress, which took three months to approve a $50.7 billion relief package for the region, and a thicket of red tape put in place to prevent the type of fraud that occurred after Hurricane Katrina.

"We've done everything we possibly can, and I think in the immediate aftermath did a very good job," Christie told the AP. "Since then, we've kind of been hostage to two situations, the delay in the aid itself and then what I call the 'Katrina factor,' which is the much more detailed and difficult rules surrounding the distribution of the aid."

Christie, widely believed to be positioning himself for a 2016 Republican presidential run, saw his popularity skyrocket after Sandy as he donned a blue fleece pullover and doggedly led the state through its worst natural disaster, a freakish storm that plunged 5.5 million state residents into darkness, damaged 360,000 homes and businesses, and disrupted gasoline supplies for days.

Christie was in many ways the face of the storm, whether he was embracing President Barack Obama during a visit to the battered coast or consoling a tearful 9-year-old girl who had lost her house and told the governor she was scared.

Lately, though, some of his admirers have become detractors.

Frustrations boiled over at a hearing last week on the pace of the recovery in Toms River, one of the hardest-hit communities. Storm victims there complained of insurance companies trying to lowball them on payouts, and stringent aid rules delaying them from rebuilding.

"These programs are intended to help; they're not. They're just putting more obstacles on you," said Vincent Giglio, a doctor from the Ortley Beach section of Toms River, which was devastated by the storm and remains sparsely populated a year later. He said getting insurance payouts and government aid has been daunting.

In this Oct. 31, 2012, file photo, President Barack Obama is greeted by New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie upon his arrival at Atlantic City International Airport, in Atlantic City, N.J. Obama traveled to region to take an aerial tour of the Atlantic Coast in New Jersey in areas damaged by superstorm Sandy.

"When I needed my government — the people I voted for — they failed me," said Danielle Vaz, of Toms River, who brought her 4-year-old autistic son along to show how months of being displaced has severely affected them both.

Christie refused to send an administration representative to any of four post-Sandy hearings because, he said, the sessions were led by Democrats out to score political points. He did assign staff to monitor the hearings and follow-up with anyone who complained.

"I get that that fact that until any one particular person you speak to is back in their homes and their lives are back to normal, they are going to be incredibly frustrated and upset and, in some cases, distraught," he said. "I think most people, if you talk to them, would say we've done a good job. Not a perfect job, but a good job."

Since the first $1.8 billion in federal recovery aid was approved, New Jersey has set up 17 separate programs for homeowners, renters, small businesses, local governments, nonprofits and developers. Counselors and administrative staff who were rude or unhelpful have been fired, he said.

The largest homeowner aid program, which provides as much as $150,000 for reconstruction, repairs, to elevate a house or protect against future flooding, has been criticized for not making any payouts from a $600 million allocation. One hundred grant applications totaling $7.8 million in assistance were signed last week, and the administration expects 200 more to be finished within days. About 4,000 homeowners are expected to benefit eventually.

Asked about the delay, Christie said cumbersome federal requirements are responsible.

After Katrina, homeowners proved their losses and got their money, he said. Under the new rules, checks go directly to builders, so the jobs are being awarded through public bidding, slowing the process. Also, environmental and historical reviews are required for post-Sandy rebuilding of homes and businesses. Those reviews weren't required after Katrina.

Though he said he understands the insistence on increased oversight, Christie, a former federal prosecutor, said he would have done some things differently. For example, he would have cut checks to homeowners instead of builders in the remediation program but required residents to keep living in their homes for a certain time as a condition of receiving the grant.

"To the victims, I'd say you're right, it is too slow, and I wish that the federal government would allow us the flexibility to get you aid more quickly," Christie said.

Phoenix shooting leaves family, dogs, gunman dead

PHOENIX (AP) — Authorities released details Sunday from a weekend shooting attack that left four family members and two dogs dead at a central Phoenix townhouse before the gunman turned the weapon on himself.

Michael Guzzo, 56, killed his next door neighbors in a deadly confrontation Saturday that may have been touched off by loud barking, police said.

Phoenix police Sgt. Tommy Thompson said there is "some indication that perhaps that was a problem." But he added a motive may never be known.

The victims have been identified as Bruce Moore, 66; his daughter, Renee Moore, 36; her husband, who took his wife's name, Michael Moore, 42; and Renee's son, Shannon Moore, 17.

Ride operator charged over 5 hurt at NC State Fair

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Authorities investigating a North Carolina State Fair ride that injured five people have concluded that someone tampered with it, and the ride's operator was being held Sunday on criminal charges.

On the fair's final day, state officials said attendance was down compared to the final weekend of last year's fair and attributed the dip partly to the injuries. They declined to elaborate on how the ride had been tampered with.

Three people remained in a Raleigh hospital on Sunday, three days after the "Vortex" ride suddenly jolted into gear as people were exiting, dropping some riders from heights that eyewitnesses estimated to be 20 or 30 feet.

Investigators determined the Vortex, known for thrilling riders with its wild twirls and flips, had been tampered with and critical safety devices were compromised, Wake County Sheriff Donnie Harrison said Saturday. Harrison's office did not return messages and officials with the state Labor Department declined to offer further explanation of the tampering and the overall investigation.

Ride operator Timothy Dwayne Tutterrow, 46, of Quitman, Ga., faces three criminal counts of assault with a deadly weapon in the mishap. Tutterrow was being held in jail Sunday on $225,000 bond and was due in court Monday for a first appearance, said attorney Roger W. Smith Jr.

"Mr. Tutterrow is absolutely devastated by what happened," Smith said in a phone interview Sunday.

Fair attendance on Friday and Saturday was down more than 11 percent compared to the corresponding days last year. While that may have been partly due to colder nighttime temperatures, the injuries probably factored into the decline, said spokesman Brian Long of the state agriculture department, which runs the fair.

"I do understand that this incident may have given some people pause," he said.

Could duck be the new chicken?

By ELIZABETH KARMELEL
 For The Associated Press

I recently spent two glorious barbecue-filled weeks in Austin, where I happily cooked for 1,200 hungry folks at a food festival. While these events tends to be crazy busy, they also involve a fair amount of down time. In this case, that down time was while I patiently waited for 50 briskets to slowly smoke to tender perfection. To fill the time, I decided to experiment with smoked duck.

Elizabeth Karmel's grilled butterflied duck with spicy watermelon glaze can be served right from the grill.

I'd had an idea to try something new that would make the ducks cook faster with less tending, and deliver a crispier skin. I was eager to try this. I also decided to up the flavor ante and celebrate one of the classic tastes of summer by bathing the ducks in a spicy watermelon glaze.

This is a technique and glaze I frequently use with chicken. I butterfly the chicken so it opens wide and flat. This helps it cook fast and produces a wonderfully crispy skin. I wanted to know if I could do the same with duck.

Using poultry scissors, I removed the backbone of the duck and flattened it like a book, twisting the wings behind the breast (this is called "wings a kimbo" and makes the duck lay flat). I coated the duck with a thin layer of olive oil and sprinkled both sides with a classic Texas barbecue rub of salt, butcher-grind black pepper and enough cayenne to turn the rub a light pink color.

Then I put the duck on the pit and patiently waited to see what would happen. After a couple hours, the butterflied duck was beautifully caramelized, and almost done, ready to be slathered with the spicy watermelon glaze. A few juicy passes with my mop and another few minutes in the pit, and the glaze set.

I took the duck out, and let it rest for about 10 minutes to make sure it would be juicy.

It was, no doubt, the best duck I'd ever made or tasted. It amazes me that a small change in the technique could make that much of a difference, and I wonder why I never thought of doing it before. It also makes grilling duck so much more accessible for everyone. It's as easy as cooking chicken, yet far more impressive (and tasty!).

Now, I'll never cook duck another way. It cooks faster, more evenly and renders the fat from the skin, leaving crispy duck skin and moist succulent meat. This summer, duck will be my new chicken!

SPICY WATERMELON GLAZE

Start to finish: 10 minutes
 Makes about 1 cup
 1 cup seedless watermelon flesh
 1/2 cup apple jelly
 Zest and juice of 1/2 lime
 1 teaspoon red pepper flakes
 1/2 teaspoon jalapeno hot sauce
 Pinch of salt

In a blender, puree the watermelon flesh until smooth. Set aside.

In a small, heavy-bottomed saucepan over medium, heat the apple jelly, stirring constantly, until it is melted. Add the watermelon juice and stir to combine. Stir in the lime zest and juice, red pepper flakes, jalapeno hot sauce and salt. Mix and taste, adjusting the seasoning if desired.

The glaze can be used warm or cooled. It can be refrigerated in a tightly sealed jar for up to 2 days.

GRILLED BUTTERFLIED

DUCK WITH SPICY WATERMELON GLAZE

Start to finish: 2 1/2 hours
 Servings: 4
 6-pound duck
 1 teaspoon kosher salt
 1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
 Pinch of cayenne pepper
 Olive oil
 Spicy watermelon glaze (recipe above)

Heat one side of a grill to medium and the other side to low. During cooking, if you get flaring from the duck fat, you may need to turn off the low side completely.

Use paper towels to pat dry the duck. Using poultry or kitchen shears, cut along each side of the duck's backbone and remove it. Turn the duck breast-side up. Open the 2 sides of the duck as if you were opening a book, and lay it flat. Break the breast bone by firmly applying pressure and pressing down. Tuck the wing tips under the upper wing and place on a sheet pan. Set aside.

In a small bowl, mix together the salt, pepper and cayenne. Brush the duck all over with olive oil. Season lightly on both sides with the spice rub. Place the duck skin-side up directly on the grill grates on the cooler side of the grill. Grill for about 2 hours.

After 2 hours, brush the glaze on the duck. Continue grilling for another 20 to 30 minutes, brushing with the glaze 2 more times during the final grilling time. Grill until the juices run clear and the thigh registers 190 F.

Remove the duck from the grill and brush with glaze one last time. Let the duck rest for 10 minutes. Cut the duck into halves or quarters and serve.

Marcia Wallace dies, voice of 'Simpsons' Krabappel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marcia Wallace, who was the voice of scoffing schoolteacher Edna Krabappel on "The Simpsons" and played wisecracking receptionist Carol on "The Bob Newhart Show" in the 1970s, has died. She was 70. "Simpsons" executive producer Al Jean said in a statement Saturday that her "irreplaceable character" — who contended with Bart Simpson's constant antics — would be retired.

Jean said he was "tremendously saddened" when he found out about "the passing of the brilliant and gracious Marcia Wallace. She was beloved by all at The Simpsons."

Jean went on to say that her death was "a terrible loss for all who had the pleasure of knowing her."

The statement did not provide a date for her death, or a cause.

The longtime TV actress' credits also included appearances on Candice Bergen's "Murphy Brown" and roles on "Full House," "7th Heaven" and "The Young and the Restless."

In Their Opinion

State borrowing rises as tax cut lauded in Wisconsin

In the age of 30-second attack ads that sell candidates no differently that laundry soap and cheeseburgers, most legislators surely felt they had no choice but to support a $100 million property tax cut approved last week.

Anyone who balked surely knew what awaited them at re-election time: "Call Senator Schmedley and ask him why he voted against cutting your property taxes!" Over and over and over.

Bob Jauch of Poplar and Tim Cullen of Janesville, two of the five Democratic state senators who voted against the tax cut, are retiring from the Senate next year. Two others, Fred Risser and Mark Miller, represent the safely Democratic city of Madison. The other, John Lehman of Racine, doesn't face re-election until 2016, but surely he will be lambasted if he runs again in a previously swing district redrawn in 2010 more favorable to Republicans. Lehman won last year in a re-count.

People will argue that cutting taxes is what the people want. No kidding. They'll also argue that our property taxes are too high compared with other states. When all taxes and fees are totaled, however, we move much closer to the national median in state and local spending.

But if you don't like high property taxes and "excessive spending," you won't like this either: In the current 2013-15 state budget, we are borrowing about $2.05 billion. Servicing the state's debt will consume about 5 percent of state revenues, above the historical target of 4 percent, according to the nonpartisan Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance.

As we all know, money we borrow from somebody else has to be repaid with interest. The problem is putting all that in a 30-second ad just doesn't play as well as haranguing Sen. Schmedley for being against lower taxes.

That $100 million tax cut pales in comparison to the borrowing. Of that $2.05 billion we'll borrow between now and mid-2015, $1.64 billion will be repaid through general fund dollars. So while we will enjoy a $100 million property tax cut that could be described as modest at best ($33 for the typical homeowner), we'll be spending 16 times as much paying principal and interest on previous state spending, essentially out of the same pot of money.

The majority could argue with some conviction that the tax cut is a thank-you to taxpayers after the state finished the last fiscal year with a surplus of $759 million in the state's main account, up from an earlier estimated $670 million balance used to plan the current 2013-15 budget, according to state figures.

Tax cut proponents might also sniff that those who don't want the $33 can donate it back to their school district or favorite charity.

But lowering our borrowing saves us money now and in the future. We all feel the pinch in our own budgets when too much goes out of our paycheck to cover the mortgage, car payment, etc. Collectively, borrowing more to build and fix roads while pocketing $33 per homeowner is smart politics but short-sighted budgeting.

But come next year, the message will be clear and incessant: "Vote for me ... I cut your property taxes." People like hearing that.

They don't like, "I voted to borrow more that you'll have to pay back." Besides, that doesn't roll off the tongue nearly as well, and most voters wouldn't understand anyway.

Go nuts with the $33 ... renters don't qualify.

Happy Halloween, so or not

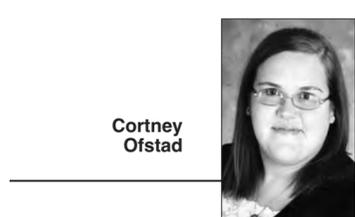

Another Halloween is now upon us, with thoughts of treats, costumes and scary monsters going through our minds.

This time of year is always really fun. It's nice to see people be creative with their costumes and see all the kids in your neighborhood walking around town asking for candy.

As with many holidays, I have wonderful memories of trick-or-treating with family, visiting relatives and friends to receive treats and parading around school in my costume.

As I've gotten older, I don't dress up anymore, hardly ever carve a pumpkin and I most definitely do not go trick-or-treating. If I went to my neighbors' doors at age 24, I'm sure they would be more likely to call the cops then give me chocolate.

One of the best parts of Halloween was the rare trick-or-treating without snow on the ground. Every year it was a challenge to find a costume that was not only warm, but could also be accessorized with a snowsuit or boots.

Cortney Ofstad

It isn't easy finding a "lady-like" way to climb over a massive snowbank while dressed as a princess.

Each year when it snows, I always feel bad for the kids and parents who put a lot of time and energy in their costumes, only to have them covered up by 17 layers to ward off frost bite.

And with the falling flakes, many of our minds skip right over Halloween and Thanksgiving and go straight to Christmas. I myself am guilty of this, and I've already purchased gifts for people because the snow got me thinking about wrapping paper, trees and holiday cheer.

The best way to handle the oncoming depression from earlier snow is to beat it at its own game. Can't find a store-bought costume to help keep away the cold? Try being creative and use the snow to your advantage.

Dress up as the abominable snowman, skier or snowmobile driver for Halloween if the snow isn't cooperating.

And if worse comes to worst, rock your costume underneath with the nine sweaters your mom made you put on. Who cares if no one can see it. Either way, you're getting free candy, so enjoy it while you can, with snow or not. Because by the time your my age, getting free candy doesn't happen, and if you ask for it, it's just plain creepy.

So be safe, don't gorge yourself on sweet treats and have a happy Halloween!

Questionable wolf hunt continues

To the Editor:

There is no scientific, biological, ethical or economic reason to hunt wolves in Michigan. Hunting will not instill fear in wolves or increase social tolerance. Hunting wolves destroys pack structure and may even cause wolf conflicts to increase. Following the inaugural wolf hunt in Wisconsin, there have been 27 wolf attacks so far this year against hunting dogs, a near record high.

Contrary to a press release by state Sen. Tom Casperson, D-Escanaba, (Daily Globe, Oct. 24), wolves are already managed through a wolf management plan which includes both non-lethal and lethal measures and compensation for producers who lose livestock to wolves. Casperson cites three recent livestock attacks near Engadine, but fails to mention that permits have been issued to kill any wolves on these properties.

Casperson cites a poll that showed support for a wolf hunt. However, the question asked was prefaced with misleading information, stating in part, "The number of wolves has gotten large enough that claims are being made that the wolves are attacking other animals and pose a threat to people in small rural areas and should be reduced in number" This tactic, known as a push poll, is a form of telemarketing-based propaganda and rumor mongering, masquerading as a poll as false or misleading information is provided to influence the response.

Between January-August 2012, there were 31 verified wolf-livestock depredation events in Michigan; however for the same period this year there were seven. The evidence is clear; when conflicts occur they must be addressed by promptly targeting the offending animals which is being done.

This last spring 250,000 signatures of registered Michigan voters, including those from every U.P. county were certified, allowing voters to decide in the November 2014 election, if the wolf should be designated as a game animal. However, Casperson circumvented the public by introducing a second bill, which became law (PA 21) and set the stage for a wolf hunt to begin this year. PA 21 takes away the right of citizens to challenge wildlife laws by allowing the Natural Resource Commission, a politically appointed body, to designate species as game.

Although we cannot stop this year's wolf hunt from proceeding, a second ballot initiative to overturn PA 21 has begun. If you would like to sign a petition or help in any way, contact me at 906-988-2892 or visit keep-wolvesprotected.com.

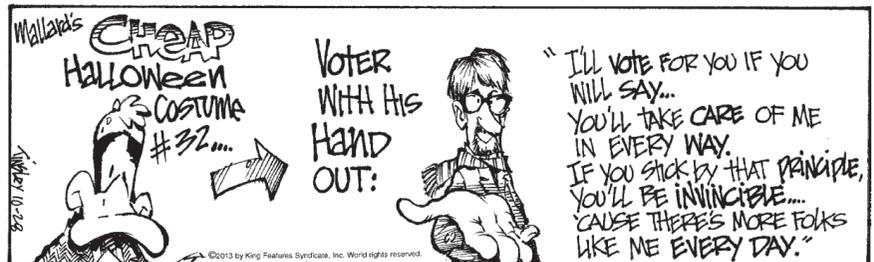

Fear, hatred and politics are not valid reasons to hunt wolves.

Mercer Public Library and Friends of the Library are seeking volunteers for fundraisers as well as working in the library. Friends were able to raise $60,000 toward the recent expansion, said library director Teresa Schmidt. For more information, call her at 715-476-2366.

Mercer Health and Wellness program is seeking volunteers, especially for their Heart Healthy Brunch in February, when it will need help setting up for the event, cooking and taking down after the event.

The program is doubling the size of their community garden next year — adding 17 more beds — if funding can be secured. The group needs donations of topsoil, as well as help putting up fencing and other gardening work, committee member Gerri Reynolds said.

The wellness programs offered include the new pickleball sessions at the community center, as well as strength training. For more information, call Reynolds at 715-493-7706.

The Church of Nazarene is seeking volunteers to paint the church next summer, Rev. Kitty Schwanke said, because of the church being "the first thing people see when they come to Mercer, and the last thing they see when they leave," due to its location on U.S. 51.

Schwanke is also seeking volunteers and members to assist in cleaning the attic of the church. Contact Schwanke at 715-476-3766.

Police search landfill for clues on missing woman

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Police are hoping to find evidence in a Menomonee Falls landfill about the disappearance of a Milwaukee woman who has been missing for over two weeks.

Because the investigation is ongoing, the Milwaukee Police Department is releasing few details. Police found nothing in the landfill on Saturday, but Lt. Mark Stanmeyer says the search resumed Sunday.

Twenty-seven-year-old Kelly Dwyer's mother reported her missing Oct. 12 after she failed to show up for work.

Burke downplays gender gap in Wisconsin governor's race

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Mary Burke's campaign to be the first woman elected Wisconsin governor comes as Republican incumbent Scott Walker deals with lagging poll numbers among women and a continued attack from Democrats that the GOP doesn't care about female voters.

It is not clear yet how much Burke is willing to capitalize on that potential weakness. She has downplayed gender in comments made in the opening weeks of her campaign, while another potential female Democratic candidate, state Sen. Kathleen Vinehout, sees it as a key issue.

"I believe this campaign is about who the people of Wisconsin believe will provide the best leadership to lead Wisconsin forward," said Burke, a former Trek Bicycle Corp. executive and state Commerce Department secretary. "I don't think this is going to be an issue based on gender, one way or the other, but of course I would be very proud to blaze that trail."

In contrast, Vinehout said health care and education will be key issues in the race, and female candidates are better positioned than men to attack Walker on those topics.

"The tone of the state would change if we had a woman governor," Vinehout said.

Mary Burke

Walker's campaign spokesman said the governor's record appeals to all voters.

"Wisconsin has turned the corner through Governor Walker's leadership with lower taxes, more jobs, and real reform," spokesman Jonathan Wetzel said. "We're confident that all voters want to continue moving Wisconsin forward, and have no desire to return to the failed policies of the past."

A Marquette University Law School poll released in July showed a significant gender gap in Walker's support. Fifty-four percent of men, compared to 43 percent of women, approved of the governor's job performance. More women than men — 52 percent to 39 percent — disapproved.

With Walker likely to face a woman in the general election, the question now is, what does he do to win more women to his side, pollster Charles Franklin said.

"The obvious assumption is that a female candidate brings women even more strongly to them," Franklin said. "There is some truth to that, but it's always important to realize that women as a group are not homogeneous. We do have more women who lean Democratic rather than Republican, overall. That's one of the foundations of the gender gap."

Deciding on which candidate to support in any election based on gender is disingenuous, said Pam Stevens, of Kenosha, vice president of the Women Republicans of South East Wisconsin.

"To me voting for somebody because of their gender is the same as voting for somebody because of their race," Stevens said. "I don't believe in that. I believe in voting for the person because of where they stand."

Stevens, who supports Walker, said Burke will have a hard time convincing people that he hasn't done a good job as governor and should be replaced.

"I think the people of Wisconsin will be smart enough to see we are moving ahead as a state," she said.

Walker signed legislation in July that requires women seeking abortions to have ultrasounds first. The law also requires doctors who perform abortions to have admitting privileges at nearby hospitals. Planned Parenthood of Wisconsin has challenged the restrictions in court.

That law and others, including one repealing equal pay protections for women and another cutting money for women's health services, led Democrats to argue that Republicans were waging a "war on women."

EMILY's List, a well-funded, pro-Democratic group that backs candidates who support abortion rights, endorsed Burke this week. The group spent nearly $5 million on Democrat Tammy Baldwin's race for the U.S. Senate last year.

Burke told news organizations this month that "women should have the freedom to make their own health choices," but was careful to avoid getting into details about her views on abortion restrictions. Vinehout is for abortion rights, and says abortion should be "legal, safe and rare."

No woman from a mainstream political party has made it past a gubernatorial primary in Wisconsin, but Burke's candidacy comes a year after Baldwin became the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate from Wisconsin. Baldwin said Burke's history as a job creator will be a more significant factor in her race than the fact that she's a woman.

"I'm very pleased that the Democrats have a very strong candidate in Mary Burke who brings real life experience in job creation and running a business to her candidacy and somebody who will stand in stark contrast to Scott Walker and his record on job creation," Baldwin said.

ASHLAND, Wis. — Wisconsin Indianhead Technical College is offering a free Career Seminar on Tuesday, Nov. 5 at 4 p.m. at WITC-Ashland.

WITC Career Seminars are designed to assist individuals in selecting the most appropriate career and educational options available. WITC Career Specialist Dan Miller will facilitate this fun and informational seminar.

The career seminar is for those who are graduating from high school, considering choices for a first career, thinking about changing careers or want to get ahead in a present career. Career seminars are held the first Tuesday of each month at WITC-Ashland.

To register for the free career seminar, call WITC-Ashland at 715-682-4591.

Career Day offered for high school students

ASHLAND, Wis. — Wisconsin Indianhead Technical College is hosting the ninth annual career day on its Ashland Campus. "Experience 4 Success" is Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 9:20-11:30 a.m. or 10:45 a.m.-1:10 p.m.

The event brings area high school students to WITC-Ashland to explore career programs through hands-on demonstrations and discussions with instructors and current WITC students. Career Specialist Dan Miller will be visiting area schools to help students register for the event.

High school-aged home-schooled or private school students are also welcome to attend the event.

For more information, please contact WITC Student Services at 715-682-4591 or visit witc.edu/ashland.

Sigurd Olson Institute awarded funds

ASHLAND, Wis. — The Sigurd Olson Environmental Institute at Northland College is undergoing a renaissance, of sorts.

Under the leadership of Executive Director Mark Peterson, in the last year alone, the SOEI has hired three new staff members and implemented dynamic projects for watershed protection and restoration, lake management and environmental analysis.

In May, SOEI and Northland College opened the Applied Research and Environmental Laboratory, a commercial lab to serve the region in water analysis. This summer alone, SOEI employed 10 students and trained them in the field and in the laboratory.

To enhance these programs and expand hands-on environmental education experiences, Xcel Energy recently awarded the SOEI $11,500. The Xcel grant will also support the Xcel Energy Scholarship and the Apostle Island School project.

"These funds are especially helpful to SOEI and Northland College now as we are building out new programs for the Institute in northern waters, wildlife and wilderness," Peterson said.

Peterson has also bolstered staple SOEI programs like the Lake Superior Binational Forum, the Chequamegon Bay Area Partnership, LoonWatch and the Sigurd Olson Nature Writing Awards, as well as reenergizing SOEI's commitment to bringing speakers on a range of topics this fall from mercury to wolves to pygmy chimpanzees.

The common thread running through Institute programs is the desire to protect and sustain the natural resources and sensitive ecology of the Great Lakes basin, Peterson said.

Ontonagon student radio offers insights

ONTONAGON — Ontonagon student radio station WOAS-FM personnel recently received their station T-shirts.

"It has become a tradition to award senior radio station personnel their "colors" early in the year so they can display their station affiliation proudly while they are still around," said instructor Ken Raisanen.

The shirts read "#LBH" on the back for the Lets Be Honest show that airs on WOAS-FM 88.5 daily from 10-11 a.m.

The program was conceived last year by former DJ Tom Croteau who has since graduated and moved on to Northern Michigan University. The remaining crew jumped on the chance to continue the program as part of their senior project school/community service project. The show offers insights into a variety of school, community and world topics.

Robyn Reports: The Nutty Neighborhood Block Party

Chapter 7: A Spitting Dispute

Editor's note: This weekly installment of a serial story for young people is provided in part by the Newspaper Association of America Foundation. This is chapter 7 of 10.

By STACY TORNIO

The story so far: During the block party's seed-spitting contest, Henry has just accused Sarah of cheating.

The crowd starts buzzing with whispers.

"Sarah the seed-spitting champion is a cheater?"

"I always thought she looked suspicious."

"So that's how she did it all those years!"

Mrs. Rogers walks up to Henry. Everyone is watching.

"What are you talking about?" she asks him.

"This!" Henry says.

He picks up Sarah's glass of water. Each spitter is allowed to drink water between spits.

"You'd better tell me what's going on, Henry," Mrs. Rogers says.

"This isn't water," Henry says. "This is soda. Sarah's been drinking soda to build up more saliva. She's a cheater!"

The crowd starts buzzing again. Sarah is a tough competitor, but I don't believe she's a cheater.

"Wait a minute," I say. "There's one way to find out."

"How?" Mrs. Rogers asks.

"Taste it," I say.

"Yeah," Sarah says. "Taste it."

Mrs. Rogers takes a drink. Then she looks at Henry.

"No," she says. "Sarah is not a cheater. This is water."

"But ... I thought ... I ..."

Henry stammers.

He knows he's lost the battle.

The second round begins.

Sarah spits even farther.

So does Henry.

They are clearly the top two spitters in the neighborhood.

They flip a coin at the beginning of the third round. Sarah loses the toss.

She has to spit first. I look around the back yard. The crowd is really big now.

Mrs. Rogers gives Sarah her first seed. Sarah swishes it around in her mouth. After one minute, she spits it through the air. It lands on the far edge of the blue tarp. The crowd cheers.

"We'd better get another tarp," Mrs. Rogers says. "Someone might set a new record."

They mark Sarah's seed and add another tarp. When Henry gets his seed, he rolls it around in his mouth. I can see him biting it with his teeth. He looks mad.

"SPIT," Mrs. Rogers says.

Henry's seed soars across the back yard. It lands just outside of Sarah's.

The crowd cheers again. When Sarah spits her second seed, it barely goes 5 feet, far short of the first seed.

"Awww," the crowd says in unison. Henry laughs. "Ha!" he says.

Sarah looks worried. Henry spit his second seed even farther than the first.

"How do you like that?" he asks. Sarah looks out at the crowd. Then she looks over at her sister.

"You've got this, Sarah," Madison says. "Just pretend we're practicing at home."

Sarah puts the seed in her mouth. She closes her eyes.

"That's right, Sarah," her sister says under her breath.

After a minute, Sarah opens her eyes.

"SPIT!" Mrs. Rogers says.

Sarah doesn't even hesitate. She grabs onto the deck railing and lunges forward. The seed flies past Henry's first two seeds. The crowd goes wild.

Henry takes his third seed and grinds it with his teeth. When it's time, he throws his head sideways and the seed takes off.

It lands inches behind Sarah's. Or was that inches in front of Sarah's? Which seed belongs to which spitter? The crowd doesn't know how to react. No one is sure.

"I WIN, I WIN, I WIN!" Henry shouts.

"Wait a minute," Mrs. Rogers says. "We're going to have to take a closer look at this."

She walks up to the seeds. She turns back to Mr. Allen. He is the official judge.

"Who won?" she asks him. He shrugs his shoulders. Mrs. Rogers looks back at Sarah and Henry.

"Maybe we should do one more

Illustrated by Roel Wielinga round," Sarah says.

"No way," Henry says, grinding his teeth. "I'm the winner. That's my seed," he insists, pointing to the farthest seed.

"Wait a minute," I say to Mrs. Rogers. "I don't think we need to do another round."

"You don't know anything," Henry says to me.

Now I don't feel bad that Sarah is my favorite spitter. I walk up to the two seeds and examine them. Yep, just what I thought.

"I know exactly who the winner is," I announce.

Charles J. 'Chuck' Carpenedo

WAKEFIELD, Mich. — Charles J. "Chuck" Carpenedo, 86, of Bessemer, died Wednesday, Oct. 23, 2013, in Wakefield. He was born March 14, 1927, in Bessemer, son of the late Peter and Ann (Montesi) Carpenedo.

He grew up in Bessemer and attended Bessemer schools, graduating from the A.D. Johnston High School with the class of 1944. He was drafted into the U.S. Navy. Following his discharge, he returned to Bessemer.

On July 8, 1950, he was united in marriage with Betty A. Certano at St. Sebastian Catholic Church in Bessemer by Father Harris. Chuck and Betty then moved to southern California, where Chuck drove truck and used his GI Bill to attend aircraft mechanics' school.

He worked for North American Rockwell and Rockadyne Corporation. He eventually became crew leader. He worked on the Apollo rockets, which took the U.S. astronauts to the moon.

In 1965, the family moved back to Bessemer, where Chuck and Betty joined C & M Oil Company to take over his father's share of the partnership. In 1980, the Carpenedos took over sole ownership of C & M, and their children Jim and Dee joined the company. Chuck was part of the family business until his retirement in 1989.

Chuck enjoyed music, and he played his trumpet in several dance bands and in Marty's Goldenaires. He and Betty loved to dance whenever they could. They also traveled with senior tour groups to many parts of the country.

They were active members of the Paisano Club, and Chuck was an officer in the club.

A gracious host, Chuck enjoyed family celebrations and was concerned that everyone was comfortable and well fed.

He is survived by his wife, Betty, of Bessemer; his son Jim (Shirley) of Bessemer; his daughter, Dee, of Bessemer; two granddaughters, Susan of San Francisco, Calif., and Karen of Mauston, Wisc.; a brother, John (Lee) of San Jose, Calif.; a sister, Nancy (Carlton) Gotta-Rudolph of Ironwood; and a niece and three nephews.

In addition to his parents, Chuck was preceded in death by a brother, Julius.

Cremation has taken place at the Range Crematory in Hurley.

Mass of Christian Burial will be held on Thursday, Oct. 31, 2013, at 11 a.m. at St. Sebastian Catholic Church in Bessemer. Father Ben Hasse will be the celebrant. A luncheon will follow in the church hall. The family will receive friends on Thursday from 10 a.m. until the time of the Mass.

In lieu of flowers, memorials in Chuck's memory are preferred to the Mayo Clinic Alzheimer's Disease Research Center, 200 First St. SW, FP2-700, Rochester, MN 55905.

Arrangements are by Range Funeral Service and Crematory, Ketola-Burla Funeral Home.

Bernard D. Eppolite

TUCSON, Ariz. — Bernard D. Eppolite, 97, of Tucson, formerly of Bessemer, Mich., died Tuesday, Oct. 22, 2013, in Tucson. He was born May 30, 1916, in Bessemer, son of the late Arnold and Mary (Masnaghetti) Eppolite.

On March 14, 1938, he was united in marriage with Eileen Provencher at St. Ambrose Catholic Church in Ironwood, Mich. They resided in Bessemer until 1973, and then moved to Tucson. For 40 years he lived in the same home in Tucson, in the Far Horizons Mobile Home Park. Eileen preceded him in death on June 4, 1991.

Bernard was a member of St. Sebastian Catholic Church in Bessemer, where he was also an usher. In Tucson, he was a member of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church.

Bernard had been employed in iron mining for twenty years. He also worked for the Bessemer Creamery.

Bernard loved fishing, traveling, and gardening. He loved sports, but after all the major league strikes he quit watching professional sports and turned to college games. His favorite team was the University of Arizona. He was kind and always willing to help out his neighbors. Whether it was a trip to the doctors or to the grocery store, Bernie was there.

He was a life member of the Knights of Columbus. He is survived by two daughters, Karen (Larry) Thomas of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Denise (Bud) Korich of Leominster, Mass.; nine grandchildren; 17 great-grandchildren, and nine great-great-grandchildren.

In addition to his wife and parents, Bernard was preceded in death by a son, David; a daughter, Janice; and five brothers, Hugo, Charles, Vincent, Frankie and Louis.

Mass of Christian Burial will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 30, 2013, at 1 p.m. at St. Sebastian Catholic Church in Bessemer. Father Ben Hasse will be the celebrant. Visitation will be held Tuesday evening from 5-7 p.m. at the Frick-Zielinski Funeral Home in Bessemer, with a prayer service at 5:30, and from noon until the time of the service at the church.

Burial will be in the Hillcrest Cemetery in Bessemer. Pallbearers will be David, Michael and Gary Thomas; Bruce Eppolite; Todd Korich; and Nicholas Thomas.

Arrangements are by Range Funeral Service and Crematory, Frick-Zielinski Funeral Home in Bessemer.

Mesich to publish book on paranormal

By KATIE PERTTUNEN kperntunen@yourdailyglobe.com

IRONWOOD TOWNSHIP — Andrea Mesich, a paranormal investigator since 2004 from Ironwood Township, is publishing a book about her experiences with paranormal activity in the Upper Peninsula called "Ghost in the Coal Cellar" through Llewellyn Worldwide on Aug. 8.

Most of the stories in the first book of a series are based in the U.P., Mesich said, including locations at the Paulding Light, Mission Point Resort Theater on Mackinac Island, as well as a private investigation of an Ironwood family's home. Another investigation in the book involves a Wisconsin Rapids schoolhouse where "a lot of weird things happened," Mesich said.

"So many people have had issues with paranormal activity, but don't ask for help for fear of being ridiculed," Mesich said. She provides her services for free locally, and also travels. "I do it more for the research," she said.

She is soon traveling to St. Paul to investigate the Historic Mounds Theater, where performers experience seeing full body apparitions and feeling touches from former performers, one of whom died there.

The first thing Mesich does in an investigation is rule out a natural explanation, she said. Sometimes wiring issues can cause problems in a home or building's electromagnetic fields, which can cause paranoia or feelings that there is something in the house.

The next step is to hold a K2 session, she said, where she uses a meter to detect the presence of ghosts by communicating with them.

Mesich uses two electronic recorders, because spirits communicate on a different wavelength than people do, she said, no different from digital recorders, cassette recorders, or video recorders. "I have high success with that," she said.

Mesich provides her services confidentially, because many people don't want other people to know about their paranormal issues. "I didn't believe in ghosts until I experienced one myself," Mesich said.

She has spoken to many religious leaders about the issue of souls waiting to get into Heaven and their spiritual presence in the world.

"I tried to talk to people from the Native American tribes near the Paulding Light, but no one wanted to talk about it," Mesich said.

Mesich is planning to host a local symposium.

Sand mining bill sponsor says it needs changes

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The chief Senate sponsor of a bill that would weaken local control over Wisconsin's booming sand mining industry says his legislation needs work and he doesn't expect the Senate will take it up before next year.

The bill is supported by companies that mine and process silica sand that's used by the oil and gas drilling industry for hydraulic fracturing.

But Sen. Tom Tiffany, R-Hazelhurst, told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel that local government officials have raised valid objections that need to be addressed.

"Realistically, we are not going to see the Senate vote on this, this year," Tiffany said. He declined to say whether the Senate mining committee, which he chairs, will vote before year's end.

The bill was the subject of a contentious, overflow hearing before the committee Thursday. Tiffany said the measure would shift regulatory authority to the state and eliminate an emerging patchwork of restrictive local ordinances. But opponents said the proposal amounts to an unwarranted attack on small government and could put people who live around the mining operations at risk.

The bill's prospects are also uncertain in the Assembly, where Speaker Robin Vos, R-Rochester, has said his chamber won't hold a vote until next spring at the earliest.

Wisconsin's silica sand mining industry has grown from five mines in 2010 to 105 as of April, according to the Legislative Fiscal Bureau. With the increase have come concerns about potential health hazards from silica dust and damage to roads, leading local governments to pass their own ordinances governing mines in their areas.

Lawrence inaugurates new president

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — A former Princeton University official has been named the 16th president of Lawrence University in Appleton.

Mark Burstein was formally inaugurated Saturday. The 52-year-old spent nine years at Princeton, where he was an executive vice president.

He now takes over at Lawrence, a liberal-arts school with 1,500 students.

In his inaugural address, Burstein recalled how Lawrence was founded in 1847 with a $10,000 commitment from a Boston businessman. He noted that the Fox Cities area has a larger population now than the entire state of Wisconsin did back then.

Burstein says the school must sustain its sense of creativity and continue to embrace the unknown.

Appleton Mayor Tim Hanna presented Burstein with a Green Bay Packers jersey with the number 16, reflecting Burstein's status as the school's 16th president.

Michigan considers grading schools from A to F

LANSING (AP) — Green is a great school. Red is bad one. Lime, yellow and orange are in-between.

Michigan's new color-coded school accountability system already could be up for an overhaul just two months after its debut. Some lawmakers say schools should get A-F grades just like students do, so parents and others can easily understand performance.

"It's not clear, it's not concise and it's not transparent. Nobody knows what a lime green means, but everybody knows what an A means," said House Education Committee Chairwoman Lisa Posthumus Lyons, an Alto Republican who is expected to start hearings this week on her soon-to-be introduced legislation to switch to letter grades.

Letter grades — implemented in roughly 15 states — seem intuitive on their face since schools are used to evaluating students with letter grades of their own. The tricky part is determining how the rankings are calculated and making sure they are credible.

Indeed, Lyons' bills would do more than change the performance scorecard from colors to letters. She said she wants to change the formula so that grades "accurately reflect" schools' quality.

In the 2012-13 scores released in August, some schools were rated red despite being seen as traditionally high-performing, while other schools got green scores despite having no performance data because they were new, according to critics.

Another complaint is that Michigan's separate top-to-bottom percentile ranking of schools, which is part of its accountability system under a waiver from federal no Child Left Behind requirements, closely correlates with student poverty rates. And others complain that the top-to-bottom list and separate color grades are not aligned, confusing educators and the public.

One goal of the House bills is to eliminate the top-to-bottom ranking and replace it with A-F grades so there is a single system. That does not mean that designations such as "reward," "priority" and "focus" schools would necessarily go away because they are in the state's waiver to the U.S. government. But priority schools in the bottom 5 percent and subject to state intervention could be "F" schools. Reward schools in the top 5 percent could be "A" schools.

Rodgers, Packers cruise past Vikings

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Aaron Rodgers has the Green Bay Packers rolling, even without three of his best receivers.

There's a powerful running game on his side now, as if Rodgers needed any more help.

Ignoring the injuries around him, Rodgers picked apart what's left of Minnesota's depleted defense by throwing two first-half touchdown passes to Jordy Nelson and guiding the Packers to a 44-31 victory Sunday night.

"I think this is really shaping up to be one of Aaron's best years," Packers coach Mike McCarthy said. "Aaron's had a lot of challenges Monday through Saturday that don't show up on the stat sheet, just trying to get on the same page with younger players and trusting the game plan."

Missing Randall Cobb, James Jones and Jermichael Finley, Rodgers finished 24 for 29 for 285 yards to help the Packers (5-2) stay in first place in the NFC North.

"We expect greatness out of our guys," Rodgers said.

Christian Ponder's encore went poorly for the Vikings (1-6), who sent out a different starting quarterback for the third straight week. Adrian Peterson gained a quiet 60 yards on 13 carries, Greg Jennings had just one catch against his old team and the Vikings offense counted only three plays in the third quarter as the Packers pulled away in their final game at the Metrodome, now known as Mall of America Field.

Ponder didn't turn the ball over, but he was again out of sorts under pressure in the pocket all night. He finished 14 for 21 for 145 yards against a defense missing three starting linebackers to injury and added a late touchdown run. Coach Leslie Frazier said he wasn't sure yet whether Ponder would keep the job for another game.

The Vikings beat the Packers 37-34 last December to make the playoffs. But they needed 199 yards rushing from Peterson and the best game of Ponder's career to do it, because Rodgers has rarely found resistance from this defense in purple. In his last eight games against the Vikings, he has 22 touchdowns and only three interceptions while completing roughly three-quarters of his passes. The Packers have won seven of those.

"I wasn't going to let this team beat us," Rodgers said, adding: "A lot was on my shoulders."

Micah Hyde had a punt return for a touchdown for the Packers, who never punted and held the ball for more than two-thirds of the game to counteract Cordarrelle Patterson's opening 109-yard kickoff return for a touchdown. The Packers have won 15 of their last 16 games against NFC North teams.

"We've got a great team, very well-coached," Rodgers said. "Guys are ready to play. It was loud in here. It was a tough environment, but guys stepped up."

GREEN BAY Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers (12) runs toward the end zone in the second half against the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday in Minneapolis.

Associated Press

The Packers scored on their first two possessions, running a total of 31 plays for 160 yards that drained 15 minutes and 48 seconds off the clock. Eddie Lacy finished with 94 yards and a touchdown and James Starks ran for 57 yards and a score.

"Everybody wants a 1,500-yard rusher. I've always wanted an 1,100-yard rusher, because I plan on being in the playoffs, so I want him running the same way in January and February as he is in September and October," McCarthy said.

The way Lacy has been pounding the ball, as the leading NFL rookie rusher, Rodgers hasn't had to come up with as many clutch throws with his top targets missing. Lacy and Starks took turns trampling an exhausted Vikings defense, with each guy contributing a touchdown on the ground and the Packers reaching a season-high 182 yards rushing.

"When the heck is the last time the Green Bay Packers rushed for 200 yards on somebody?" defensive end Jared

Allen said, slightly exaggerating the total. "If that's not a punch in the gut and a wake-up to people, something needs to be."

The Packers converted 13 third downs and two fourth downs. The only time they had the ball and didn't score was the kneel-down at the end of the game.

"These are the guys we have," Frazier said. "So we've got to figure out schematically what we can do with the guys that we have to be better."

Johnson-led Lions rally to beat Cowboys

DETROIT (AP) — Calvin Johnson thought Matthew Stafford was going to spike the ball for at least another snap.

The Dallas Cowboys did, too. Stafford's 1-yard lunge over a pile of linemen with 12 seconds left and Johnson's 329 yards receiving lifted the Detroit Lions to a 31-30 win over Dallas on Sunday.

"I was yelling that I was going to spike the ball," Stafford recalled. "But their linebackers were just standing there."

The Cowboys weren't just standing around letting Johnson make catch after catch, but he made them look helpless.

Johnson almost broke an NFL record, and could celebrate the feat because of a comeback from a 10-point, fourth-quarter deficit that some people who entered Ford Field didn't see because they had left.

"Even our fans didn't think we could pull this one out," he said. "They were leaving, but we knew we could do it."

Johnson's total trails only the 336 yards receiving Flipper Anderson had for the Los Angeles Rams against New Orleans on Nov. 26, 1989 in a game that went into overtime. Anderson had 296 yards receiving in regulation.

The Cowboys dared Detroit to throw to Johnson with a lot of one-on-one coverage. They usually asked cornerback Brandon Carr to do the improbable by

MOONSHOT: Red Sox knot World Series with Gomes' blast

Associated Press

BOSTON RED Sox's Jonny Gomes celebrates his three-run home run off St. Louis Cardinals relief pitcher Seth Maness, left, during the sixth inning of Game 4 of the World Series Sunday in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — There's no telling how these wacky World Series games will end.

One night after a rare obstruction call, Jonny Gomes hit a decisive homer when he wasn't even in the original lineup and Koji Uehara picked off a rookie at first base for the final out.

An entertaining, even goofy World Series is tied at two games apiece following Boston's 4-2 victory Sunday night, which ensured the title will be decided back at Boston's Fenway Park.

"Emotional roller-coaster here, obviously," Gomes said.

Inserted into the lineup about 75 minutes before gametime, Gomes hit a tiebreaking, three-run shot off reliever Seth Maness in the sixth inning.

Felix Doubront and surprise reliever John Lackey, both starters during the regular season, picked up for a gritty Clay Buchholz to help the Red Sox hang on.

And of course, another bizarre ending: Uehara picked off pinch-runner Kolten Wong — with postseason star Carlos Beltran standing at the plate.

It was the first postseason game in history to end on a pick-off, according to STATS.

Game 5 is Monday night at Busch Stadium, with Boston left-hander Jon Lester facing Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright in a rematch of the opener won 8-1 by the Red Sox.

Gomes helped get Boston started in the fifth when he followed David Ortiz's leadoff double with a 10-pitch walk that tired starter Lance Lynn, who had faced the minimum 12 batters through the first four innings.

Stephen Drew's sacrifice fly tied the score 1-all, erasing a deficit created when center fielder Jacoby Ellsbury's third-inning error advanced Matt Carpenter into scoring position for Beltran's RBI single.

Ortiz, who homered in the first two games of the Series, had three of Boston's six hits

MHSAA FOOTBALL PLAYOFF PAIRINGS ANNOUNCED

The MHSAA Football playoff pairings were announced Sunday evening for all eight 11-player divisions and the 8-player division.

Qualifying teams for the playoffs were divided into eight divisions of 32 schools each. Within each division are four regions of eight teams each; and within those regions are two districts of four teams each. Pre-District pairings are based on regular-season computer rankings, with the first-place team in each District hosting the fourth-place team; and the second-place team hosting the third-ranked team.

Most playoffs games will be held this Friday evening, but official dates and times will be announced later today.

Williams runs for 230 as Panthers maul Cougars

By John Vrancic
Escanaba Daily Press

EBEN — Junior quarterback Kayne Williams carried a big load for the Ewen-Trout Creek Panthers Saturday as they handed the Superior Central Cougars a 42-18 eight-man football loss.

Williams ran 41 times for 230 yards and four touchdowns and completed his lone pass for a 40-yard TD to senior Zach Leskala on the final play of the first half.

The victory, E-TC's first over the Cougars, enabled the Panthers to finish with a two-game winning streak. They ended 3-6 overall and 1-6 in the Bridge Alliance Conference.

"This is a nice win for our program," said E-TC coach Larry Maki. "We were led by sophomores all season. I think we have a lot to look forward to. We've got to take this as a big step forward."

The Panthers grabbed the lead on the first play from scrimmage when Williams dashed 52 yards on a keeper.

He scored again on a keeper, this time for 16 yards and a 14-0 lead midway through the opening frame on this chilly, windy and blustery afternoon in western Alger County.

The Cougars (2-6 overall, 1-6 league) got on the board with 2:25 left in the first quarter on sophomore Phil Pasanen's 12-yard run through the middle, set up on a blocked punt by senior Tucker Spranger on the previous play.

E-TC, however, had a response early in the second stanza with Williams scoring up the middle from six yards and a 22-6 cushion.

Junior QB Dayne Nelson trimmed the Cougars' deficit to 22-12 on a 21-yard keeper to the right midway through the second.

Just 19 seconds later, however, sophomore Cyle Wascher broke left on a 60-yard dash and a 28-12 Panther lead.

E-TC then scored twice in the final 16.2 seconds before halftime, with Williams breaking through the middle on a 23-yard run and tossing his scoring pass to Leskala and a 42-12 advantage. The latter TD in that sequence was set

Problems picking wedding party members

Dear Annie: I am getting married next year. One of the most stressful things for me is picking the attendants. I have my best man and two groomsmen. My fiancée, "Sara," suggested I add another friend, which I was happy to do.

Then, a good friend found out and was a little upset that I didn't choose him, as well. He tried to joke about not being in the plaint. In addition, he is a stingy tipper.

His wife says nothing when these things happen. But we are embarrassed by his behavior. We don't want to humiliate them or cause a scene by being critical. What do you suggest? — A Friend of Waiters

Dear Friend: You can tell a lot about a person's character by the way he treats the wait staff at a restaurant. If you insist on socializing with this boorish man, we suggest you avoid places where he will cause embarrassment and ill will. Go to a movie or a play, and stop briefly for a drink after. Meet for coffee. Invite them to your home if you prefer to share a meal. We think his wife will know why you no longer eat out with them, and she will inform her husband. How they choose to deal with that is up to them.

Dear Annie: I cried when I read the letter from "Hurt and Alone," whose husband goes out drinking with his cheating friends and leaves her at home.

I, too, have been hurt and alone for years. My husband's alcohol intake, work schedule and need to be the social center of attention have taken priority in our marriage for 20 years. My husband is the kind of guy who treats everyone to everything, so people think he's the greatest. He's not a raging, belligerent or violent alcoholic. He's a successful functioning alcoholic who is an expert at excuses and turning the tables.

Tell "Hurt and Alone" that she is not the only one who has spent many a night waiting for her husband to come home. I was once a self-assured, confident woman, but I've lost myself coping with endless lies and loneliness while trying to raise three children. — Lonely in California

YOUR HOROSCOPE

BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Your Birthday Monday, Oct. 28, 2013

Take on a project or search for a place to visit in the months ahead. Getting into the swing of things and broadening your horizons will turn this into a spectacular year. Don't be afraid to make the first move, and do everything with confidence and gusto.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Let emotional mishaps pass you by without causing upset. Mistakes happen, and you have too much going for you to let the little annoyances bother you. Think big and follow through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Make sure you have a serviceable Plan B ready to go. Making a snap decision or changing course midstream could confuse others, but it will bring you closer to your destination.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Take on additional responsibility today. The more control you have, the less time you'll spend explaining what you want or fixing what you don't like.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Don't leave anything to chance. Take a close look around you and figure out what everyone else is doing. Emotions are likely to surface, and sudden, unexpected change will be necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Appreciate life and the people you love. If you devote energy to projects and plans that entice you, you'll find a way to make extra money while having fun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You would be wise to avoid making last-minute decisions. Mild unpredictability will help you avoid interference in your affairs. Romance will improve your life. Get active to feel better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Put one foot in front of the other. Taking the proper precautions will ensure success. Refuse to let anyone stand in your way. Be prepared to pay for what you want — no debt, no worry.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Put love first and nurture the relationships that are most important to you. Fixing your place to ensure comfort and entertainment will lead to compliments from influential folks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Sharing with people who think like you will help you flush out any aspect of an endeavor that has the potential to go wrong. Being a team player will promote friendship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Make a decision based on your needs. You may not win, but you will find out where you stand, giving you added impetus and needed help to move on and do your own thing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Greater participation will lead to allies and strong friendships. Take pride in what you do and deliver on any promises you make. Someone from your past will offer you something special.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Don't get sidetracked, no matter what comes at you. Finish what's expected of you before someone complains. Leave plenty of time for a special get-together or to take care of personal needs.

wedding, but I knew he was a little hurt, so I asked him to be a groomsman. He has been the most excited about everything since then. So Sara and I now have four attendants each.

The problem is, I have one additional friend, "Mark," who I know will be upset if he is the only one of my close friends left out of the wedding party. I'd like to include Mark, but Sara doesn't have many friends and would have trouble finding a matching partner as an attendant.

How should I go about this? I feel weird even talking about my wedding with Mark because he isn't included. — West Coast Dilemma

Dear Dilemma: First of all, while it's nice for attendants to "match up," it is not a requirement. One groomsman can escort two bridesmaids. Attendants also can walk separately, or two groomsmen (or bridesmaids) can walk together. Discuss this with Sara, in case she has someone else she'd like to ask. Another option is to include Mark by giving him a different honor: He could be an usher, directing guests to their seats and handing out programs if you have them.

You also could ask him to read something during the ceremony or help in other ways. He would be treated the same as a groomsman and included in all planned events.

Dear Annie: My husband and I occasionally socialize with another couple our age. The problem is, at restaurants, the husband is condescending to the wait staff, repeatedly asks for substitutions and always sends some of his food back with a com-

With one fewer card, it would be easier

By Phillip Alder

Bridge can be a strange game at times. Usually, you are happy to have lots of honors, but occasionally you would find a contract much easier if it weren't for an unnecessary high card. Do not resist the idea that an honor may be extraneous.

In this deal, South is in four spades. West leads the club king. How should South plan the play?

South starts with four potential losers: one heart, one diamond and two clubs. He has nine winners; six spades, one heart, one diamond and one club. So it seems as if the diamond finesse had better be winning. In theory, this is a 50-50 shot, but surely you know that finesses never work on Mondays! And if the diamond finesse is failing, is there any other way to make the contract?

How about trying to establish dummy's diamond suit? As long as the suit is splitting 3-3 or 4-2 (or 5-1 with a singleton king) and trumps are not 4-0, an extra diamond winner can be established.

South should take the first or second club, play a trump to his king, cash the diamond ace, and continue with the diamond queen.

Suppose West takes that trick, cashes two club winners and shifts to a heart.

Declarer wins on the board, ruffs a diamond high in his hand, leads a trump to dummy's jack, ruffs another diamond high, returns to dummy with a spade and cashes the diamond eight — bingo.

The probability for this line is approximately 78 percent — much better than a finesse. And without the superfluous diamond queen in his hand, South would have seen this line immediately.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Saturday.

Ask Doctor K

By Anthony L. Komaroff, M.D.

DEAR DOCTOR K: I'm the primary caregiver for my ill, elderly father. I'm exhausted and upset all the time. What can I do to lighten my load without costing us much? Neither of us is well off.

DEAR READER: You're not alone. Approximately one in five American adults helps an elderly or disabled family member with the daily tasks of life. This caregiving runs the gamut from grocery shopping, cooking and cleaning house, to helping with baths and personal hygiene or providing hands-on medical care. That's often in addition to caring for other family members and holding down a paid job.

Caregiving may be one of the most worthwhile jobs you'll ever undertake, but it can be exhausting. It can cause immense strain, which may lead to depression and health problems.

HELP IS AVAILABLE FOR OVERTAXED CAREGIVERS

Here are some budget-conscious tips to help you take care of yourself:

-- Always accept help when it's offered. Create a list of very specific things that you would love to have help with, so you can request something specific when help is offered.

-- Tap into religious communities. A religious or spiritual community can be a strong source of assistance if you or the person you are caring for belongs to one.

-- Support groups are a good place to share ideas and experiences with other caregivers. There are quite a number of support groups for caregivers on the Internet. Just type "caregiving support groups" into a search engine.

-- Look for government-supported services. You might be surprised by how many services your father may be eligible for. These are services provided by local or state governments, or by the federal government. Ask your doctor for the name of a social worker who can work with the two of you. Particularly if your father is on Medicare, he may be eligible for help in cleaning the home, personal hygiene, and even "Meals on Wheels" delivered to the home.

-- Stay connected. Catch up with friends regularly. Establish a weekly walk with a friend or an occasional lunch or movie.

-- Clear your schedule. Set aside a regular time to spend with your partner or family, away from home.

-- Stay active. Try to get 30 minutes of moderate exercise a day, most days of the week.

-- Enjoy yourself. Listen to music, enjoy a luxurious bath, take a yoga class or do a jigsaw puzzle. Regular time off can renew your spirit and energy. If you don't take care of yourself, you won't be in very good shape to take care of your father.

-- Ease stress. Learn meditation or other relaxation techniques.

I have never had to be a caregiver for a member of my family, but many of my patients have been in that position. Their personal sacrifice and dedication inspire me. But sometimes they need help to lighten their load. Often that help is available, but they have to be proactive to find it.

defending him by himself, and sometimes attempted to slow him down with a zone.

"He had his way," Carr said. "And, we couldn't find a way to keep him from rolling."

Johnson noticed.

"It was crazy," he said. "We had a lot of one-on-one coverage today, and we were able to take advantage and hit some deep balls. Matt made some great throws to me."

The Lions (5-3) overcame four turnovers without forcing a turnover, becoming the first team to do that and win since New England did against Miami in 2007, according to STATS.

On their last drive, Stafford threw a 22-yard pass to Johnson to set up the winning score. The quarterback caught at least some Cowboys by surprise, including linebacker Sean Lee, who appeared to expect him to spike the ball to stop the clock.

"He kind of caught us off-guard," defensive tackle Jason Hatcher acknowledged.

Dallas (4-4) seemed to set itself up to win three straight for the first time this year to build a bigger lead atop the NFC East when Tony Romo threw his second touchdown — and third of the game — to Dez Bryant with 6:45 left to take 27-17 lead.

The Cowboys, though, allowed

Reggie Bush to cap an 80-yard drive with a 1-yard TD with 3:33 left.

They also had to settle for Dan Bailey's third field goal with 1:02 left after Tyron Smith was flagged for holding on third down, a mistake that stopped the clock even though Detroit declined the penalty.

"If we don't get called for a penalty, I think they probably had 20 seconds or so left," Romo said.

With no timeouts, the Lions went from their 20 to the Cowboys end zone thanks in large part to a 17-yard pass to Johnson, a 40-yard connection with Kris Durham and Johnson's 14th reception that gave them the ball at the Dallas 1.

Instead of spiking the ball, Stafford took the snap and leaped with his arms extended to beat the team he rooted for growing up in Highland Park, Texas.

"I was just as fooled as the defense was," Lions offensive guard Larry Warford said.

Stafford was 33 of 48 for 488 yards — his second-highest total — with a 2-yard TD pass to Johnson in the first quarter and two interceptions. Reggie Bush had 92 yards rushing and a score.

Romo was 14 of 30, failing to complete half his passes for the first time since 2009, for 206 yards without a turnover.

World Series

and was the club's leader, smacking his hands together and screaming at teammates to get going when he pulled into second base on his double. Then, after the fifth inning, he huddled the Red Sox for a pep talk in the dugout.

Not long after, Gomes' drive put Boston ahead 4-1 in the sixth.

With adrenaline taking over, Gomes spiked an arm through the air as he rounded first base, yelled and banged his chest with a fist twice. Teammates tugged on Gomes' beard for good luck when he got back to the dugout, including a two-handed pull by Mike Napoli.

While talk of umpires' calls dominated discussion following two of the opening three games, this one turned on a manager's pregame decision.

John Farrell's original Red Sox lineup didn't include Gomes, but Victorino's back had been bothering him since Saturday, so Daniel Nava was moved from left field to right and from fifth to second in the batting order. Gomes was inserted into the No. 5 hole behind Ortiz.

"Since I signed up for this game, all I wanted was the opportunity," Gomes said. "I just wanted to be in the box."

Gomes had been 0 for 9 in the Series before the home run, and Red Sox outfielders had been 4 for 40 with no RBIs. Following Dustin Pedroia's two-out single and a four-pitch walk to Ortiz by Lynn, Maness threw five straight sliders to Gomes, who sent the last one into the Red Sox bullpen in left as Matt Holliday kept running back only to run out of room.

"I take a lot of pride in the at-bat in front of me and behind me," Gomes said. "Obviously, Big Papi is pretty much an intentional walk. I did what I could to give him a little protection."

Carpenter singled in a run in the seventh off Craig Breslow in the seventh after pinch-hitter Shane Robinson doubled with two outs against Doubront on a ball that skidded away from Gomes. Junichi Tazawa came in and got Holliday to hit an inning-ending grounder to second, a night after allowing a tiebreaking, two-run double to Holliday.

Doubront got the win with 2 2-3 innings of one-hit relief. Lackey, the Game 2 loser and Boston's probable Game 6 starter, pitched the eighth for his first relief appearance in nine years, overcoming a two-base throwing error by third baseman Xander Bogaerts — Boston's seventh error of the Series — and a wild pitch.

With a runner on third, Lackey got Jon Jay to pop up and David Freese to ground out.

Uehara, Boston's sixth pitcher, got three outs for his sixth save this postseason, completing a six-hitter.

Lynn was the hard-luck loser, leaving with the score tied and two on for Maness, who allowed Gomes' homer on his fifth pitch.

A night after one of the craziest endings in Series history — an obstruction call on Red Sox third baseman Will Middlebrooks — Boston ensured the Series will return to Fenway Park for Game 6 on Wednesday night.

"We stayed away from throwing the ball down the third base line tonight," Gomes said.

It was a special anniversary for both teams. Exactly nine years earlier, the Red Sox completed a four-game sweep of the Cardinals across the street at old Busch Stadium for their first championship since 1918. And two years earlier, Freese hit a tying, two-run, two-out triple in the ninth against Texas and a winning homer in the 11th to force a Game 7, which St. Louis won the following night.

Buchholz, in his first appearance since the AL championship series finale on Oct. 19, fought through shoulder issues and his velocity topped out at 90 mph. He lasted a season-low four innings and 66 pitches before he was lifted for a pinch-hitter, but he allowed just an unearned run and three hits.

"We have guys with heart. Clay, he brought everything he's got," Ortiz said. "I have never seen Clay throwing an 88 mph fastball."

Fielding for the Red Sox became trouble again in the third when Carpenter singled to center with one out, and the ball appeared to take a high hop and roll away from Ellsbury. Carpenter sprinted to second on the second error of the Series by Ellsbury — who had just three during the regular season.

Beltran singled into center field two pitches later, making him 8 for 10 with 12 RBIs with runners in scoring position during the postseason.

There almost was another miscue in the fourth following a one-out walk to Jay. Freese bounced to Drew, and the shortstop grabbed the grounder on the run and flipped the ball with his glove high to Pedroia at second. He jumped and just got his left foot down in time to force Jay, who slid into him hard.

After Ortiz's double to the right-center field wall in the fifth, Gomes fell behind 0-2 in the count and then worked out his walk. Lynn appeared to be too fine with his pitches as he walked rookie Bogaerts, loading the bases, and Drew lofted a fly to medium left near the foul line.

Holliday's one-hop throw home hit the sliding Ortiz in the back and bounced away. Lynn recovered to strike out David Ross and induce an inning-ending groundout from pinch-hitter Mike Carp.

Obstruction call becomes talk of baseball world

ST. LOUIS (AP) — By Sunday morning, most everyone had become an expert on the obstruction rule.

"How can u make a call like that in the World Series," rapper Lil Wayne tweeted.

"Worst ending to a World Series game ever!" PGA golfer Hunter Mahan posted.

"Obstruction of justice," Arizona Cardinals kicker Jay Feely wrote.

No matter that the Official Baseball Rules have a slightly different take on what happened when St. Louis runner Allen Craig tripped over Boston third baseman Will Middlebrooks in Game 3 late Saturday night.

But anytime someone scores the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning without even touching home plate — called safe on an extremely rare ruling by an umpire — it's bound to cause a little ruckus.

All sides seemed to agree on this point: Allen Craig tripping over Boston third baseman Will Middlebrooks likely made for the most crazy, chaotic October finish of all-time.

And it gave St. Louis a 5-4 win at Busch Stadium and a 2-1 edge.

"As a baseball fan, you hate to see a game end like that," pitcher Adam Wainwright said Sunday before Game 4. "Obviously I'm on the Cardinals, so I'm fortunate the rule is the way it is. And you hate to say it, but he impeded the process of running home."

Said Red Sox manager John Farrell: "It wasn't a normal night of sleep, I know that."

BOSTON RED Sox first baseman Mike Napoli celebrates after tagging out St. Louis Cardinals' Kolten Wong on a pick-off attempt to end Game 4 of the World Series Sunday in St. Louis. The Red Sox won 4-2 to tie the series at 2-2. Associated Press
