SUPERIOR RANGE SHOOTER'S CLUB

Family Fun Shoot aims at safety

By RYAN JARVI
rjarvi@yourdailyglobe.com

IRONWOOD TOWNSHIP — Children and parents were invited out to the range for an annual Superior Range Family Fun Shoot event on Sunday afternoon.

Members of the Superior Range Shooter's Club hosted the event and taught families how to safely shoot the variety of weapons available.

John Pera, a Wakefield resident, has been active in the gun club for around 10 years and has held positions with its Board of Directors.

He said club members bring their own firearms and ammunition to these types of events, which allows family members to participate free of charge.

"We try to expose people to a safe environment and to introduce them to the shooting sports and competitions," he said. "The future really is with the kids, as far as the shooting sports."

Rocky Robinson, of Ironwood, brought his daughter Abbagail, 7, to the event.

"It's something to do as a family," he said. "Everyone here is very helpful and they give good hints and really explain how to do things. It's fun for the family."

Abbagail, who had never shot before, got to take aim and squeeze the triggers of a .50-caliber Hawken flintlock rifle.

She said shooting the rifle was "fun." Some of the targets had playing cards attached, which kids were asked to aim for and allowed to take home as a souvenir, Pera said.

The family shooting day is typically held in the spring, but because of the weather, it was moved to August.

USPS to host two more POST Plan community meetings

By RYAN JARVI
rjarvi@yourdailyglobe.com

Two more small-town Michigan post offices will be holding meetings and considering public opinion on what people want done with the rural branches.

Trout Creek and Bruce Crossing post offices are likely to see reduced window service hours as part of the U.S. Postal Service's POST Plan.

The POST plan was introduced in 2012 as part of a restructuring effort to help the USPS save costs by reducing hours of, or closing, more than 13,000 post office branches throughout the nation, many of located in small towns and rural communities.

Representatives from the USPS have been holding public meetings to inform customers of the POST plan and to answer questions, as well as listen to suggestions for new operating hours of the local branch.

Surveys have also been sent out to customers in the service areas asking for input on how the USPS should move forward with its plan.

In many cases, the USPS wants to reduce office hours, unless there is a strong preference — more than 60 percent — in the community survey results to conduct a study on closing the branch.

Options in the survey include: Reducing hours; closing the office and providing retail and delivery services through a rural carrier; closing the office and finding an alternate location to be operated through a contractor, typically a business, which could provide more service hours than what the local office would provide, and close the office and relocate P.O. box service to a nearby post office.

Relay for Life wraps ups with pancakes

By MIRANDA ANDERSON

BESSEMER — Gogebic County's Relay for Life wrapped up Saturday morning with a fundraising pancake breakfast at the Bessemer VFW.

With a menu of pancakes, French toast, eggs, baked goods, orange juice and coffee, the Bessemer and Wakefield VFWs helped raise some money for the fight against cancer.

The 2014 Relay for Life was centered around Massie Field in Bessemer, from noon to midnight. There were games, music, food and luminaria in honor and memory of those with cancer.

"We've been kids holding Relay for Life events for over 20 years," said volunteer Carole Lillar. "It was kind of a carnival atmosphere. This year's theme was 'Fishing for a Cure.'"

The Gogebic Range Band and Marty's Goldenaires performed Friday night.

Proceeds from the events at Massie Field and Saturday's breakfast will go to the American Cancer Society.

Relay for Life was founded by Gordon Klatt in 1985 in order to raise money for cancer awareness and research.

"Basically, it's to remember our survivors and to honor those we've lost," Lillar said.

"It gives us time to gather and celebrate life," said ACS Gogebic County Chairman Stephanie Swartzendruber.

Gogebic County Fair features brew contest

IRONWOOD — Home beer brewers are invited to enter a craft beer contest at the Gogebic County Fair next Saturday.

"The beer fridge in the local deli, liquor store or supermarket will tell you that people are drinking a wider variety of beers than ever, thus comes craft beer. It's a challenge to be creative with flavors and processes and then wait to taste the result," said contest organizer Artie Soborowicz.

There will be pale, dark, amber and other categories. The competition is open to any amateur home-brewer 21 or older.

All entries must be hand-crafted products, containing ingredients available to the general public, and made using private equipment by hobbyist brewers.

Entries must be in and labeled by 11 a.m. Saturday to the Turn Two Saloon (across from the exposition building) for check-ins.

Each entry will consist of two 12-ounce to one liter capped bottles or corked bottles void of all identifying information, including labels and embossing. Printed caps are allowed, but must be blacked out completely.

One bottle will be offered for auction on Sunday and becomes property of the fair.

White Thunder Riders hosts grass drags

By MIRANDA ANDERSON

SAXON, Wis. — The White Thunder Riders Snowmobile Club held its third annual vintage grass drags at the Iron County Fairgrounds Saturday.

"We just decided to do a racing event and there are a lot of vintage competitions throughout the Midwest," said member Joe Olson.

Besides the snowmobile races on grass, other events included an ATV pull, live music and a 50/50 raffle. Refreshments were served by the Iron County Fire Department and 4-H Club.

"Fifty-nine machines competed in 16 different classes," Olson said. "We had more racers this year than any other year, so that's a move in the right direction."

Competing classes included a youth class, 1983 and older "retro" class, and mini 120s stock class. All classes received

A SURFER rides a wave near the seawall in Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, Friday. Iselle, the first tropical storm to hit the state in 22 years, knocked out power, caused flooding and downed trees when it crossed onto the Big Island in a rural and sparsely populated region.

How tropical weather shook up an island paradise

HONOLULU (AP) — Sunshine and blue skies returned to parts of Hawaii on Sunday after days of heavy rain and gusting winds brought by Tropical Storm Iselle, the first to make landfall in more than two decades. A second storm in the Pacific, Hurricane Julio, had tourists and residents on edge but is moving away from the islands and no longer posing a threat.

Iselle, initially a hurricane, left the most traveled and populated areas of the state largely unscathed, but toppled trees and power lines when it hit the Big Island early Friday. Thousands of people there remained without power or any idea when it would be restored.

Here is a summary of how the storms affected Hawaii:

Initial concerns:

For the first time in 22 years, a hurricane was on course to hit Hawaii, launching urgent preparations earlier this week. But the worries weren't just Hurricane Iselle. A second and stronger hurricane, Julio, also had the potential trajectory to hit the islands.

Preparations:

With two hurricanes looming, airlines canceled flights to and from the mainland and between islands. Businesses, schools and government offices closed, boarding up windows and placing sandbags in preparation for winds and flooding. Residents emptied grocery stores of bottled water and other supplies. People banded down their homes or flowed into emergency shelters and hoped for the best.

Transit services and tourist attractions like the memorial sites at Pearl Harbor shut down, but officials kept plans to hold Saturday's primary elections, including heated congressional and gubernatorial races.

Landfall:

Iselle's center made landfall early Friday as a tropical storm, having weakened late Thursday about 50 miles offshore. It hit the Big Island first, pounding it with heavy rain, violent wind and ocean surges. The island's formidable volcanic mountains took a toll on Iselle, essentially splitting the spinning storm in half.

The weakened Iselle diverted south, its outer bands peppering Maui, Oahu and Kauai with less intense rain and wind.

Damage on the big island:

While the Big Island helped curb Iselle, it also took the brunt of the storm. About 25,000 people lost electricity. Days later, thousands remained in the dark and were told to expect extended outages.

Coffee farmers navigated flooded streets to check on their crops, and residents used chain saws to break up fallen trees blocking roads. Water, ice and other supplies were flown to the area, and roads were being cleared, Gov. Neil Abercrombie said Sunday.

Robert O'Connor, who runs the Country Cottage on the Big Island, said Sunday that the inn lacked power and running water. He provided guests buckets to flush the toilets and said they weren't enjoying showering in the rain.

"Everybody hunkered down," he said, adding that the main roads reopened and a nearby fire station allowed people to shower there.

Damage elsewhere:

On Kauai, rescuers found the body Saturday of a 19-year-old woman believed to have been swept away in a stream while hiking Friday in a closed state park.

On Oahu, there was little damage to Joseph Cambe's lei stand. "It was not too bad," he said Saturday, days after taking down flowers ahead of Iselle. "We lost one day of business, but we can make it up by opening early and closing late."

Tourists:

In the popular tourist destinations of Waikiki and Pearl Harbor on Oahu, the hours after Iselle were far different than on the Big Island. While rain poured, the storm passed south of the island and did not have much of an impact. By Friday night, life was nearly back to normal. Open-air waterfront restaurants were bustling, Hawaiian bands serenaded tourists, and people were out swimming and surfing, despite the overcast skies.

"We appreciated the preparation, and that Iselle behaved," said Silvia Otto, a traveler visiting from California.

Forecast:

The National Weather Service said Hurricane Julio is moving away from Hawaii. The agency downgraded Julio, which is 400 miles northeast of Honolulu, to a Category 1 hurricane, the lowest level. But the storm is affecting trade winds that usually keep the islands cool, so hot, muggy weather is expected through the first half of the week.

"We'll build back to the tropical paradise we've come to love," meteorologist John Bravender said of the second half of the week.

Cool summer sets expectations for a record harvest in Midwest

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A mild summer across much of the nation's heartland has provided optimum growing conditions for the nation's corn and soybean crops. Pair that with high-yield seeds and other new farming technologies, and the U.S. is looking at busting records come harvest time.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture already has predicted a record soybean crop of 3.8 billion bushels. And the corn crop, it said in July, would be large but not bigger than last year's record of 13.9 billion bushels. However, many market analysts and some farmers expect the USDA to revise expectations upward in a report based on field surveys that's due out Tuesday.

"Conditions look just fantastic across most of the country," Texas A&M University grain marketing economist Mark Welch said.

In a typical growing season, at least some corn-growing states would have experienced drought or other production problems. But the 18 states that grow 91 percent of the nation's corn have experienced nearly ideal conditions this year, as adequate rain fell when plants emerged and cooler summer temperatures minimized heat stress.

That's the case in Illinois, one of the nation's top corn and soybean states.

"Illinois has largely been dealt to date pretty close to a royal flush on weather and I'm sure that the yields are going to be very high here," said Scott Irwin, a University of Illinois professor of agricultural and consumer economics.

The expected large harvest has driven corn and soybean prices significantly lower, but it isn't expected to make much of a short-time difference in consumer food prices. However, since the grains are staples in livestock feed, lower prices could eventually lead to a decline in the cost of beef, pork, chicken and milk.

"Eventually the economics will feed through but I wouldn't expect much relief in 2015 yet. It just takes time to go through the systems," Irwin said.

Weather doesn't deserve all the credit for the amount of grain farmers are getting from each acre this year.

Agriculture companies have developed genetic characteristics in seeds that allow plants to be packed more densely per acre and arm them with resistance to drought, disease, and pests. In addition, larger planters and tractors equipped with GPS programs can run at night if needed, helping farmers adjust planting when weather delays field work.

"When conditions are right we have the ability to get in and get that crop established so much more quickly than we could in the past ..." Welch said. "We're just creating an environment that when the weather cooperates we're capturing more of the potential and the possibilities genetically that are within that corn plant."

During the lifetime of the average U.S. farmer, who's 58, corn yields have more than tripled from a national average of 44 bushels per acre in the 1950s to nearly 150 bushels per acre in recent years.

Study explores Asian carp effects on Lake Erie

By JOHN FLESHER
 AP Environmental Writer

TRAVERSE CITY (AP) — A successful invasion of Lake Erie by Asian carp wouldn't necessarily doom its valuable sport fish such as yellow perch and walleye, a newly released scientific paper said.

The analysis concluded the nutrient-rich lake might have enough food to go around even if voracious silver and bighead carp eventually develop as big a presence there as native species. Also, the newcomers and at least some of the lake's existing fish might frequent different areas and depths, reducing competition.

But there's too much uncertainty to relax efforts to keep the carp out of Lake Erie, which has the largest fish population of all the Great Lakes despite being the shallowest and smallest by volume, scientists said.

"I would not suggest complacency," said David Lodge of the University of Notre Dame, a contributor to the paper published this week in the journal Conservation Biology. "Especially since the study didn't deal with other potential damages such as the silver carp's jumping behavior, which could negatively affect recreational boating."

Bighead and silver carp, which feed on microscopic aquatic organisms called plankton, were imported from Asia in the 1970s to cleanse sewage ponds and fish farms. They escaped into the wild and have infested the Mississippi and other major rivers. Government agencies have spent hundreds of millions of dollars on measures to shield the Great Lakes.

Scientific opinion differs on how widely the carp would spread there and their likely effect on food chains, although many warn they pose a serious risk to the lakes' $7 billion fishing industry.

"The best experiment would be to put the fish in the lake and see what happens, but we don't have that availability," said Notre Dame scientist Marion Wittmann, the article's lead author. "It wouldn't be feasible or ethical."

Instead, she and other study leaders based their findings on mathematically weighted estimates provided by 11 fish biologists and Great Lakes experts.

The paper concluded that if they gain a foothold in Erie, Asian carps' biomass — or combined weight, a standard measure of fish abundance — could exceed that of walleye and yellow perch combined.

Even so, it said yellow perch biomass wouldn't necessarily drop as a result and could even rise by up to 50 percent. The potential effects on walleye varied widely — from a 60 percent decline to a 40 percent jump.

Cowabunga! 'Ninja Turtles' bring box-office power

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" sliced off $65 million at the weekend box office.

Paramount Pictures' comic-book adaptation featuring Megan Fox alongside computer-generated renditions of the pizza-eating, sewer-dwelling superheroes lunged into first place in its debut weekend, according to studio estimates Sunday.

The action film's totally tubular result prompted the studio to announce plans Sunday for a sequel set for June 3, 2016.

Megan Colligan, Paramount's head of domestic marketing and distribution, said the success of the "Ninja Turtles" reboot was mostly derived from a pair of distinctly different audiences: men who fondly remembered the 1980s and '90s franchise that spawned a cartoon series, toy line and a live-action film trilogy, and youngsters familiar with a newer Nickelodeon animated TV series.

Marvel Studios' "Guardians of the Galaxy" slid into second place in its second weekend with $41.5 million, bringing its total domestic haul to $175.9 million.

"Guardians" and "Ninja Turtles" are coming to the rescue of an otherwise shell-shocked summer box office, which is still down more than 16 percent over a year ago.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Rentrak.

1. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," $65 million ($28.7 million international).

2. "Guardians of the Galaxy," $41.5 million ($40.1 million international).

3. "Into the Storm," $18 million ($8.3 million international).

4. "The Hundred-Foot Journey," $11.1 million.

5. "Lucy," $9.3 million ($21 million international).

6. "Step Up All In," $6.5 million ($6.5 million international).

7. "Hercules," $5.7 million ($7.2 million international).

8. "Get on Up," $5 million.

9. "Down of the Planet of the Apes," $4.4 million ($29.5 million international).

10. "Planes: Fire & Rescue," $2.4 million ($3.5 million international).

National Scrabble Championships start in New York

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Scrabble fanatics from around the globe have come to Buffalo, New York, to compete for the $10,000 top prize at the 25th National Scrabble Championships.

The Buffalo News reported the event has attracted 525 players from 11 countries. It started Saturday.

Contenders will each play 31 games over five days, with winners based on number of victories and point totals.

One returning competitor is Nigel Richards, a 47-year-old

Australian and resident of Malaysia who has won the past four championships.

Participants say the event is competitive but social, providing opportunities for players to bond over their shared love of the popular board game.

The tournament comes days after the announcement that 5,000 new words had been added to "The Official Scrabble Players Dictionary."

Winners will be announced Wednesday.

In Their Opinion

Distracted passengers missing much on trip

You would have had to be living in a cave to have not heard the term “distracted driving” over the past several years.

The increased usage of smartphones and texting while driving have really brought this dangerous act to the forefront. Many will argue there are other forms of distracted driving, all of which often end with the same result — a tragic accident.

What we haven't heard much about — and maybe you're even hearing about it here for the first time — is what we'll call “distracted passenger syndrome.”

Those of us older than 30 can certainly recall those family trips when, in order to pass the time away, we played games or sang songs to pass the time.

These days, kids are now glued to a DVD player or some other electronic device as soon as they climb in the car. What cause does that really have on these passengers? No longer do they learn the lay of the land. Can they get from one side of town to the other? Do they know a red light means stop? What's that ticking noise before we turn?

Kids are oblivious to what is going on around them while in the car, and ultimately it will result in the decline of driving skills, which will likely result in higher insurance rates and other expenses.

The next time a young person is traveling with you, have them put the electronic device down and pay attention to what is going on around them. Doing so might even force them to ask, “Are we there yet?”

Death penalty teaches wrong lesson

To the Editor,

One of the first things all human beings experience is death. Most try to avoid death, unless the person is very old and finds that living is no longer a desirable experience.

In the United States, if a person kills or attempts to kill another person it is considered to be a very serious crime and the person is given a long prison sentence or is sentenced to death.

The death penalty tells people in our country that sometimes it is okay to kill another person.

If we wish to tell our people that it is never appropriate to kill another human being, we should eliminate the death penalty. Most other advanced nations do not have the death penalty.

'Reality' TV short on 'real' entertainment

Just the other morning, I took a trip down memory lane as I watched an old reality television show before heading to work.

The show called “The Hills” was on MTV when I was in college. I watched it constantly and thought it was a great show.

However, when I watched a rerun late last week, I was shocked at how unbelievably dumb the show was. All it did was follow pretty, rich girls throughout California, highlighting their drama, partying and not working, just gossiping on the job.

I found myself racking my brain as to why I would have thought this show was any good. But then it hit me, I was a victim of reality TV.

As much as we don't like to admit it, each and every one of us has watched a “not so good” reality show because it was intriguing, even for a brief moment.

For some, it was “Jersey Shore,” others “Keeping up with the Kardashians.” Maybe “Here Comes Honey Boo Boo,” is your guilty pleasure.

Cortney Ofstad

No judging will take place, because we have all been there, and done that, whether we want to admit it or not.

Lately, when flipping channels I found a common theme amongst the programs on my television — any and everything Alaska.

“Alaska State Troopers,” “Surviving Alaska,” “Alaska: The Last Frontier,” “Alaskan Zombies,” are on my TV constantly. (OK, I made the last one up, but you get my drift.)

My friend and I joked a few weeks ago that all you have to do to become rich is move to Alaska and contact TLC, because they'll make anything into a television show.

Whatever happened to writing decent story lines, actors being believable in their roles, and characters we could relate to, not people getting drunk on CMT, or housewives from some city yelling and beating each other up?

Television has become lazy. No extraneous effort is required when you stick a camera in front of a random person and allow them to live their lives.

It's sad really, and yet I also find myself watching week after week.

Hopefully in the future we can see past the thinly veiled, so-called “reality” TV and find something decent to watch.

My advice, watch PBS. You can always learn something new on PBS.

Thought for Today

“Keep your dreams, for in them lies joy denied to men grown wise.” — Edgar A. Guest, American author, journalist, poet (1881-1959)

Great Lakes restoration bill gets Senate hearing

In July, the Water and Wildlife Subcommittee of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee held a hearing on the Great Lakes Ecological and Economic Protection Act, which I introduced along with a bipartisan group of eight Senate cosponsors, including Illinois Sen. Mark Kirk, my co-chair on the Senate Great Lakes Task Force, and Michigan's Sen. Debbie Stabenow.

This legislation would help restore and protect the Great Lakes, the largest source of surface freshwater on the planet. It would target the most significant problems facing the Great Lakes and ensure that we implement these projects cost-effectively.

The Great Lakes are one of the world's great treasures, providing drinking water to more than 40 million people; supporting 1.5 million U.S. jobs and $62 billion in wages; transporting critical supplies for manufacturing, electricity generation and food for the world; and supporting the region's $4.6 trillion economy.

The Great Lakes brought industrial and natural resource development to the region, which resulted in tremendous economic development and population growth. This development, however, also resulted in toxic substances polluting the waters and sediments, untreated wastewater threatening public health, and polluted runoff choking habitats and killing aquatic life. The recent toxic algae bloom on Lake Erie that cut off drinking water to a half a million residents is just one example of how much we depend on our lakes.

The Great Lakes Ecological and Economic Protection Act, also known as GLEEPA, would tackle problems from past pollution and protect the lakes from current and future threats.

GLEEPA would formally authorize the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative, an inter-agency program launched by President Obama in 2009 to implement a regional collaboration strategy developed in 2005 through a process established in an executive order by President George W. Bush.

The history of the restoration strategy clearly shows the work of restoring and protecting the Great Lakes is founded on a plan that reflects a broad range of viewpoints and has strong bipartisan support.

GLEEPA would focus federal resources on the areas of highest priority identified in the collaborative plan, which would be further refined as new science and information become available. While the GLRI is broadly authorized in the Clean Water Act, passing this legislation would help ensure the program has clear congressional direction and goals, is results-driven and transparent, and implements the most cost-effective solutions.

The bill would also formally establish the Great Lakes Advisory Board to provide advice and recommendations concerning restoration and protection. The board would reflect many different viewpoints, including local, state and tribal governments; environmental, agricultural and business organizations; hunters and anglers; and academia.

Finally, the bill would formally establish a 10-member interagency task force to coordinate restoration efforts, ensure projects are not duplicated and that they use existing successful programs. GLEEPA also would accelerate progress toward the goals of the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, a formal agreement between the U.S. and Canadian governments establishing shared goals for protecting and improving water quality of the Great Lakes.

The GLRI has achieved real progress: cleanup of more than 1.3 million cubic yards of contaminated sediment; control of the destructive sea lamprey and restoration of sturgeon, trout and other important fish species; construction and improvement of barriers to prevent an invasion by destructive Asian carp, and planning for additional measures to keep these fish out of the lakes; protection of tens of thousands of vital habitat acreage; and restoration of thousands of miles of rivers for fish passage. GLEEPA would help ensure that progress continues to be made using a solid framework for achieving measurable and outcome-based results.

The Great Lakes are precious and irreplaceable. As temporary stewards of this invaluable resource, we must do all we can to restore and protect the Great Lakes for the millions of people who depend on them today and the millions more who will in the future.

I'm glad the Water and Wildlife Subcommittee held an important hearing on this vital legislation, and I'm hopeful it can receive approval from the full committee and move on to a vote in the Senate.

Carl Levin is the senior U.S. senator from Michigan and co-chair of the Senate Great Lakes Task Force.

"The kids are having a blast today," he added.

A single-shot .22 pistol and a .22-caliber Mare's leg/laig, which was essentially a child's size lever-action rifle, but considered a concealed weapon because of its barrel length, were also available to shoot.

One of the stranger weapons was a Medieval-era hand cannon, a small metal barrel mounted at the end of a wooden stick you held up to shoot. The cannon was loaded with powder, a little cannonball—round about .57 caliber—and a wick that was lighted to fire.

Some of the other weapons at the range included an AR-15 semi-automatic rifle, an M1-Garand from World War II, a replica Civil War-era Henry rifle, and an 1870s Sharps rifle, which gun club members said was the "Buffalo gun of the wild west."

Two Rivers company wins Burgers Bar cheese curd contest

By MIRANDA ANDERSON news@yourdailyglobe.com

GILE, Wis. — Riverside Foods, of Two Rivers, came out on top of the Burgers Bar and Grill's "Cheese Curd Throwdown" Saturday afternoon.

Six competitors entered their products, including cajun, jalapeno and Leinenkugel-battered curds.

But first prize went to Riverside's T. Rivers' Half-naked

White Cheese Curds.

Riverside, a food products manufacturer, won a plaque and its curds will be featured on Burgers' menu for a year.

"We're trying to keep things Wisconsin here with Wisconsin products," said restaurant co-owner Ricardo Luna.

"We have Wisconsin beers, too."

This was the first event of its kind for Burgers.

"We're planning to do this every year," said Luna. "It will probably be in September next year."

Around 40 to 50 attended the event. "Considering how busy the weekend was, I was happy to see that many people," Luna said.

Attendees were encouraged to bring items to donate to the Iron County food pantry.

"It was a lot of fun," Luna said.

Tribe declines to name representative to mining impact board

Great Lakes Inter-Tribal Council Director Mike Allen last week said no tribal representative has been appointed to the seven-member Mining Investment and Local Impact Fund Board.

Wisconsin Public Radio reported the tribes don't plan on appointing a member on the board overseeing investment money from the proposed Gogebic Taconite open-pit iron ore mine near Upson and Mellen.

The board has members from Iron, Forest and Bayfield counties. One member works in Ashland County.

"There'd be no need for it," Allen said. "They felt like they'd be like a token Indian with this thing."

Allen told WPR it was a consensus vote. He said the tribal council wants the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and federal government involved, however.

Bad River Tribal Chairman Mike Wiggins said to create jobs, the region should pursue farming and food cooperatives, instead of mining.

A spokesperson from Gov. Scott Walker's office said the seat will remain vacant and the office will continue to work with the tribes.

Bike trails to link Minnesota, Wisconsin

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A number of trail projects underway and in development will allow many more riders to bike between Minnesota and Wisconsin.

A multimillion-dollar loop trail will be built in the next few years, connecting the two states with nearly 5 miles of paved trail as part of the new St. Croix River bridge project, according to the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The project also has sparked action in St. Croix County, Wisconsin, to create the county's first extensive trail system, which would connect ultimately to St. Paul.

Dave Mandel, chair of the St. Croix Bike & Pedestrian Trail Coalition, said exactly what a St. Croix County trail system would look like remains unclear, but a network that connects communities including Hudson, New Richmond, Somerset and North Hudson is being discussed.

With the current Gateway State trail, bikers have 18 miles of paved trail from outside of Stillwater to St. Paul. Work is underway to connect that trail with the Browns Creek Trail, adding another 6 miles of trail and connecting bikers to downtown Stillwater.

More trails will be connected in 2017, when the St. Croix Crossing River Loop Trail is expected to be completed. That trail will cross the Stillwater Lift Bridge, which will be converted to a bike and pedestrian bridge.

Walkers and bikers will then be able to travel up a hill in Houlton, Wisconsin, along shoulders and down to the new St. Croix River bridge before crossing and traveling up along the Minnesota side of the river.

Voter ID ruling creating confusion for primary

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Voters will not have to show photo identification to cast a ballot in Tuesday's primary election, but poll watchers say they're still concerned there could be confusion thanks to a recent state Supreme Court ruling that the photo ID law is constitutional.

The court's decision didn't reinstate the law because the photo ID requirement was previously blocked in federal court. Republican Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen is trying to get that ruling put on hold in time for the November general election.

The opposing legal views create confusion, especially for voters who aren't paying close attention or may be misinformed, said Larry Dupuis, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union in Wisconsin. The biggest concern is that someone without an ID may assume they can't vote, so they won't show up, Dupuis said.

"There's certainly some potential for confusion," he said.

"There's always some risk because if people only see a headline or the beginning of a TV news report and the take-away is it's been upheld, there's a risk people won't look beyond that. And there's also the rumor mill."

The ACLU represented individuals who challenged the photo ID requirement in the federal lawsuit, which was blocked and called unconstitutional. Dupuis said even one of the ACLU's clients was confused about the status of the law after hearing about the state Supreme Court upholding the law on July 31 — 12 days before the primary.

"Unfortunately, not everyone can pick up their phone and call an attorney to straighten it out," Dupuis said.

The state's chief elections official, Kevin Kennedy, deflected concerns, saying he wasn't worried about voters not coming to the polls out of confusion. Many voters who don't know the status of the law come prepared with a photo ID just in case, he said.

Traverse City-Williamsburg rail route focus of plan

TRAVERSE CITY (AP) — It's time to consider providing passenger rail service between Traverse City and the nearby community of Williamsburg as a start toward reviving train travel in Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula, a nonprofit advocacy group says.

The Michigan Land Use Institute said that using the 11-mile stretch of rail could boost tourism and development in the area.

"It's a low-cost way to add capacity to our existing transportation network while supporting development along the track at the same time," said James Bruckbauer, a transportation policy specialist with the institute and author of the report.

Such a passenger rail line could be a first step toward restoring Traverse City's passenger rail connection to the rest of the state, Bruckbauer said.

It would cost much less to upgrade the track than to reconstruct a 1.5-mile section of U.S. 31, the highway linking Traverse City and Williamsburg, according to the report.

"While year-round daily commuter trains might be too expensive for now, a seasonal tourist-shuttle could be a low-cost, achievable first step," the institute said in a statement. "The estimated cost to improve the tracks — less than $2 million — is modest when compared to the $9 million cost to reconstruct just 1.5 miles of U.S. 31," the institute said.

Amtrak now operates passenger rail service in Michigan, but the routes are all in the southern half of the Lower Peninsula. The lines run between Chicago and Grand Rapids, Detroit and Port Huron.

The National Association of Realtors helped fund the report, and the association's regional director said the passenger train service could aid the area's economy.

"We've got plenty of evidence that rail projects can have a very positive impact on neighborhood development," Kim Pontius, executive director of the Traverse Area Association of Realtors, said in a statement. "We need to think of transportation solutions other than the automobile. This project, if realized, may prove to be a great way to test the thesis."

Deputy stops super-drunk Canadian trucker on I-94

PAW PAW TOWNSHIP (AP) — Authorities in southwestern Michigan say they stopped a Canadian truck driver who was weaving across lanes of Interstate 94 and found he had 4 1/2 times the legal amount of alcohol in his system.

The Van Buren County sheriff's department says it got a call Saturday night to watch for an eastbound tractor-trailer that was weaving "all over the road." It says in a statement that a deputy stopped the truck in Paw Paw Township, 15 miles west of Kalamazoo.

The department says the 28-year-old Brampton, Ontario, driver had opened alcohol containers with him and tested far above the legal limit for alcohol.

Michigan law sets a 0.04 percent blood alcohol limit for commercial truckers and 0.08 percent for other drivers.

The trucker was jailed pending a court appearance.

Iraqi prime minister to file complaint against new president

■ US forces launch fourth round of attacks Sunday

BAGHDAD (AP) — Iraq's embattled Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, in a surprise speech late Sunday, resisted calls for his resignation and accused the country's new president of violating the constitution, plunging the government into a political crisis at a time it is battling advances by Islamic State militants.

Al-Maliki is seeking a third-term as prime minister, but the latest crisis has prompted even his closest allies to call for his resignation. A parliament session scheduled for Monday to discuss the election and who might lead the next Iraqi government was postponed until Aug. 19.

On Sunday night, in a nationally televised speech, al-Maliki declared he will file a legal complaint against the new president, Fouad Massoum, for committing "a clear constitutional violation."

Al-Maliki, whose Shiite-dominated bloc won the most seats in April elections, accused Massoum of neglecting to name a prime minister from the country's largest parliamentary faction by Sunday's deadline. He said the president has violated the constitution "for the sake of political goals."

Al-Maliki, speaking on Iraqi TV for the first time since U.S. forces launched airstrikes and humanitarian airdrops in Iraq last week, said the security situation will only worsen as a result of Massoum's actions.

"This attitude represents a coup on the constitution and the political process in a country that is governed by a democratic and federal system," al-Maliki said. "The deliberate violation of the constitution by the president will have grave consequences on the unity, the sovereignty, and the independence of Iraq and the entry of the political process into a dark tunnel."

The political infighting could hamper efforts to stem advances

SAILORS GUIDE a military plane on the flight deck of the U.S. Navy aircraft carrier USS George H.W. Bush on Sunday in the Persian Gulf. by Sunni militants who have seized a large swath of northern and western Iraq in recent weeks.

President Barack Obama warned Americans on Saturday that the new campaign to bring security in Iraq requires military and political changes and "is going to be a long-term project." Obama said Iraqi security forces need to revamp to effectively mount an offensive, which requires a government in Baghdad that the Iraqi military and people have confidence in. Obama said Iraq needs a prime minister — an indication that suggests he's written off the legitimacy of the incumbent, al-Maliki.

Critics say the Shiite leader contributed to the crisis by monopolizing power and pursuing a sectarian agenda that alienated the country's Sunni and Kurdish minorities.

Just hours after al-Maliki's speech, the U.S. State Department said Sunday it "fully supports" the new Iraqi president.

State Department spokeswoman Jen Psaki said in a statement the U.S. supports the process to select a prime minister "by building a national consensus and governing in an inclusive manner." She said the U.S. rejects any effort to use coercion or manipulation in the process of choosing a new Iraqi leader.

The U.S. airstrikes have reinvigorated Kurdish forces battling the Islamic State militants in northern and western Iraq. Kurdish forces retook two towns from the Sunni militants on Sunday, achieving one of their first victories after weeks of retreating, a senior Kurdish military official said.

Kurdish peshmerga fighters were able to push the militants of the Islamic State group out of the villages of Makhmour and al-Gweir, some 28 miles from the Kurdish capital of Irbil, Brig. Gen. Shirko Fatih said.

The United States launched a fourth round of airstrikes Sunday against militant vehicles and mortars firing on Irbil as part of efforts to blunt the militants' advance and protect American personnel in and around the Kurdish capital.

U.S. warplanes and drones have also attacked militants firing on minority Yazidis around Sinjar, which is in the far west of the country near the Syrian border.

In the Kurdish capital on Sunday, the president of the semi-autonomous Kurdish Regional Government, Massoud Barzani, said American military support has been effective thus far, but, he added, peshmerga soldiers require more firepower to defeat the militants.

"We are not asking our friends to send their sons to fight on our behalf," Barzani told The Associated Press in a brief interview. "What we are asking our friends is to provide us support and to cooperate with us in providing us with heavy weapons that we are able to fight this terrorist group."

Vandalism reported after vigil for Missouri man

FERGUSON, Mo. (AP) — A few thousand people crammed a suburban St. Louis street Sunday night at a vigil for an unarmed black man shot and killed by a police officer, while afterward several stores were looted and car windows were smashed.

The candlelight gathering was for 18-year-old Michael Brown, who police said was shot multiple times Saturday after a scuffle involving the officer and two people in Ferguson, a predominantly black suburb of the city.

At the vigil, people placed candles, flowers and a teddy bear at the exact location where Brown was killed. One group of young men broke off to spray paint "R.I.P. Michael" on the street.

Afterward, an Associated Press reporter saw some people looting a convenience store. Several other stores along a main road near the shooting scene were broken into and looted, including a check-cashing store, a boutique and a small grocery store.

People were seen carrying armloads of goods such as bags of food and toilet paper. Police kept watch on the crowd but did not appear to be intervening.

Other witnesses reported seeing people vandalize police cars and kick in windows. Witnesses said the police refrained from retaliating.

There were no immediate reports of injuries. St. Louis county officials did not immediately return calls seeking comment.

Hundreds of local residents had protested the shooting earlier in the day, and a civil rights leader expressed outrage at the killing.

St. Louis County Police Chief Jon Belmar said the shooting occurred after an officer encountered two people — one of whom was Brown — on the street near an apartment complex in Ferguson.

Los Angeles woman punched by patrolman speaks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marlene Pinnock said she thought she was going to die as a California Highway Patrol officer straddled her, repeatedly punching her head on the side of a Los Angeles freeway.

During an hour-long interview with The Associated Press on Sunday — her first public comments since the July 1 beating was caught on video by a passing driver — Pinnock spoke haltingly or in a whisper, occasionally putting her hands to her temples and grimacing.

Her attorney Caree Harper frequently interrupted her and limited her responses to a reporter's questions.

"He grabbed me, he threw me down, he started beating me, he beat me. I felt like he was trying to kill me, beat me to death," Pinnock said.

Pinnock, 51, was released from the hospital last week after several weeks of treatment for head injuries and now slurs her speech, Harper said.

Pinnock is suing CHP Commissioner Joe Farrow and Officer Daniel L. Andrew in federal court for civil rights violations. The suit claims excessive force, assault, battery and a violation of Pinnock's due process rights.

The CHP hasn't identified the officer but said he had been on the job for 1 1/2 years and is on desk duty pending completion of the internal investigation.

Farrow met with community and civil rights leaders in Los Angeles multiple times last month and pledged that the investigation will conclude in weeks rather than the usual months.

SMOKE AND dust rise after an Israeli strike in Gaza City in the northern Gaza Strip on Sunday.

Israel, Hamas accept Egyptian cease-fire proposal

CAIRO (AP) — Israel and the Hamas militant group accepted an Egyptian cease-fire proposal Sunday, clearing the way for the resumption of talks on a long-term truce to end a month of heavy fighting in the Gaza Strip that has taken nearly 2,000 lives.

The announcement marked the second time in less than a week that the bitter enemies had agreed to Egyptian mediation. A similar three-day truce last week collapsed in renewed violence over the weekend.

The truce took effect at midnight (2101 GMT), preceded by heavy rocket fire toward Israel. In Cairo, the Egyptian Foreign Ministry said the cease-fire would allow humanitarian aid into battered Gaza neighborhoods and the reopening of indirect talks on a more lasting and comprehensive deal.

Hamas is seeking an end to the Israeli-Egyptian blockade against Gaza, while Israel wants Hamas to dismantle its formidable arsenal of rockets and other weapons.

Palestinian negotiators accepted the proposal early Sunday after meeting with Egyptian officials throughout the weekend. Israeli officials concurred later. Both delegations are back in Cairo.

Qais Abdelkarim, a member of the Palestinian delegation, said indirect talks with the Israelis would begin Monday "with the hope of reaching a lasting cease-fire." The goal, he added, was to end the blockade, which he called "the reason for the war."

The recent fighting has been the heaviest between Israel and Hamas since Hamas took control of Gaza in 2007. More than 1,900 Palestinians have been killed, including hundreds of civilians. On the Israeli side, 67 people have been killed, including three civilians. Nearly 10,000 people have been wounded and thousands of homes destroyed.

The fighting ended in a three-day cease-fire last Tuesday. Egypt had hoped to use that truce to mediate a long-term deal. But when it expired, militants resumed their rocket fire, sparking Israeli reprisals. The violence continued throughout the weekend, including a burst of fighting late Sunday ahead of the expected cease-fire.

Michigan lawmakers look to pass pro-wolf hunt bill

LANSING (AP) — Michigan lawmakers on Wednesday are expected to pass a law to keep intact the state's power to allow wolf hunts, overriding two referendums on the November ballot backed by groups that oppose hunting the once-endangered animal.

The pending move not only is sparking debate over whether a wolf hunt should be held for the second straight year. It also is reviving questions over the extent to which the Republican-controlled Legislature should interfere with issues headed to a statewide vote.

In May, legislators approved a minimum wage increase to head off a ballot initiative that would have raised the hourly minimum more, particularly for tipped employees. Election officials later ruled that proponents had not collected enough valid petition signatures regardless.

In December 2012, lawmakers passed a replacement for an emergency manager law struck down by voters in a referendum a month before.

The proposal before the Legislature now — initiated legislation backed by various outdoor and hunting groups that gathered voter signatures — is designed to make moot November referendums on two laws that cleared the way for Michigan's first wolf hunt in decades.

The Natural Resources Commission scheduled the hunt under authority granted by the Legislature last year. Opponents had gathered enough voter signatures to require a referendum on a law approved in December 2012 that designated the gray wolf a game animal.

So Gov. Rick Snyder signed a second law in May 2013 giving the commission the authority to decide which animals should be designated as species that can be hunted, prompting opponents to collect enough signatures this year for a second referendum.

"It's enormously contemptuous of voters," Jill Fritz, director of Keep Michigan Wolves Protected, said of the Legislature's expected approval of the new legislation. "They don't trust the voters to make the decision on whether wolves should be a game species or not. They've basically shown contempt for the intelligence of voters, the very voters who by the way voted them into office."

But Sen. Tom Casperson, an Escanaba Republican who strongly supports the initiated bill, said it was voter-initiated and a lot is at stake for hunting in general — not just the wolf hunt that led 22 wolves to be killed in the Upper Peninsula last November and December. The state had authorized a take of 43.

Associated Press

THIS APRIL 18, 2008, file photo provided by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife shows a gray wolf. The Michigan Legislature could move as early as next week to pass a pro-hunting law designed to make moot two statewide referendums in November that would stop state-sanctioned wolf hunts.

The measure — like one of the laws subject to referendum — would carry out the wishes of voters who approved a 1996 ballot initiative giving the commission, whose members are appointed by the governor and serve staggered terms, authority to set hunting policy in Michigan based on scientific data, Casperson said.

"The United State Humane Society has an awful lot of money," he said, warning that if the hunting laws were repealed in November, the animal rights group could be emboldened to challenge other hunting-related decisions by the state. "I get concerned that they could pour enough money in with 30-second sound bites ... and I can't say people would get the whole story."

The anti-wolf hunt ballot group has spent nearly $1.1 million on signature gathering and other expenses. The pro-hunting ballot committee has spent more than $700,000.

Pro-hunting and farm groups contend the opposition to wolf hunting is fueled by out-of-state animal rights groups that want to ban all hunting. Opponents acknowledge receiving support from elsewhere but insist their movement is home-grown.

In recent days, there have been reports that five hunting dogs and a cow died after three separate wolf attacks in the U.P. Foes of wolf hunting say farmers and government officials already have the right to kill problem wolves without needing an annual state-endorsed hunt.

The Board of State Canvassers certified the initiative petition on July 24. The Legislature has until Sept. 2 to vote or it will be placed on the November ballot alongside the referendums, according to the nonpartisan House Fiscal Agency.

The Senate's only session day before the deadline is Wednesday. The House meets Wednesday and Aug. 27. Because the bill is a citizens' initiative, it would not need Snyder's signature.

The measure would allocate $1 million for "rapid response" activities against aquatic invasive species such as Asian carp. The appropriation would make the legislation immune from being overturned in a referendum.

Keep Michigan Wolves Protected is not ruling out legal action if the Legislature approves the bill, Fritz said.

Bay City losing millions of gallons in water break

BAT CITY (AP) — Bay City officials were searching Sunday for the source of a water main break that was draining 10 million gallons of water a day and threatening to empty reserves by Monday in the Michigan city of 35,000.

Bay City has declared a water emergency, and public works Director Dave Harran said Sunday that the situation was urgent. He urged residents and businesses to avoid all unnecessary water use, according to The Bay City Times.

Crews discovered Saturday afternoon that there was a major water main break, Harran said, and they searched all night for its location without success. He said the city's water reserves could be empty by Monday unless the location of the leak is found and crews can halt it.

On Sunday afternoon, crews were inspecting four water mains that run under the Saginaw River to see if any of them is the source of the leak.

Schneiders score 4th Paavo sweep

Ben wins record 9th title; Candice takes 4th straight title

By JASON JUNO
sports@yourdailyglobe.com

HURLEY — No man or woman has won as many Paavo Nurmi Marathons after Ben Schneider, 30, of Minneapolis picked up his ninth straight win at Saturday morning's 46th annual race.

He celebrated by running his fastest Paavo — 2:33:01.

His wife, Candice, 29, also won again, making for the fourth straight Schneider sweep, which happens to be the number on her race bib. Candice battled the sunny and hot morning to finish in 3:15:21, 3 minutes, 53 seconds faster than second-place Denise Hefferin of Saint Charles, Ill.

Ben became the winningest male last year. He surpassed the eight Paavos won by Ann Heaslett and Mary with another dominating win this year. The runner-up was more than 11 minutes back.

The second-place finisher had a familiar name, Bryan Schneider, who even hails from Minneapolis, like Ben and Candice. He isn't related to the Paavo champions, though.

It was a fast day for Ben. "I just tried to get out a little quicker than usual," Ben said. "I usually try to hold back until after (mile 10) because that's the highest point on the course. Today, I just figured I'd try to go after it early since I knew it'd be the coolest time of the day. I was able to just keep it up."

Schneider caught a few people off guard on Silver Street with his speedier time. His previous best came in 2012 at 2:34:50.

"I knew I was trying to go after it, but when I turned the corner and saw the clock was still under 2:33, that was a great feeling," he said. "When it gets late in the race, I try not to look at my watch because it can be more demoralizing than encouraging sometimes."

Schneider has smashed Paavo records for wins since he started running in 2006 and Saturday was no different. Mary Bange and Ann Heaslett both won eight Paavos. Heaslett won eight in a row from 2001 to 2008. Bange won eight races in a span of nine years from 1976 to 1984.

Now Ben is by himself with nine titles. "It's always great; I love this race," Schneider said. "I'm going to keep on trying to do it."

"It's exciting (to break another record). It's tough to just stay healthy year after year so I feel blessed to keep getting out here and going after it."

Candice battled the heat as temperatures soared into the 70s before 9 a.m. under a relentless sun.

"I don't consider myself a good heat runner. I just hate heat," she said. "I went out at like a 3:10 pace and I'm like, 'Yeah, I can probably do this.' That was not a good idea. I didn't fall off too bad."

Candice finished 14 seconds quicker than last year, which was cooler, but her injury, hamstring tendinopathy also affected her then and not this year.

IRONWOOD — One of the nice things about events such as the 2014 Induction Ceremony of the Ironwood Area Sports Hall of Fame is that everyone walks out into a warm summer evening feeling good about the night's festivities.

It happened again on Saturday night at the Gogebic Community College Lindquist Center Courtside Dining Room with four new individual inductees and the undefeated 1963 Ironwood Red Devil football team entering the Hall of Fame. They included Percy Smith (Class of 1961), basketball coach Harry Peterson, Larry Passint (Class of 1971) and Jay Synkelma (Class of 1981). Kristen Ruppe was one of Ironwood's finest female athletes and was to be inducted with the 2014 Hall of Fame class. Due to an out-of-town commitment, she requested that she be inducted with the Class of 2015.

U-M runner breaks Paavo half-marathon record

By PAT KRAUSE

HURLEY — It's been said that records are made to be broken and two more fell in the women's half-marathon and the hand-cycle division of the 46th annual Paavo Nurmi Marathon on Saturday. And it was accomplished in temperatures approaching 80 degrees that seemed even hotter.

Anna Pasternak, 21, is a very fast distance runner. She was so fast that she blew the doors off the old record in the women's half-marathon by nearly five minutes. She blazed to a new record of 1:24:22.

Pasternak lives in Brighton, Mich. and runs cross country and track for the University of Michigan. She found her way to northern Wisconsin, because her aunt (Deb Gotham) lives in Bessemer and her grandmother resides in Silver City, Mich. She always comes to visit in August. This time she also ran the Paavo.

"This was a fun opportunity," Pasternak said. "I liked running alongside the Gile Flowage and it was shady there. I didn't start out too fast, but my training has been geared towards cross country. But I got progressively better and I ran with a guy and could see the second place guy (in the men's half-marathon) at the end."

After winning, Pasternak was off to watch her mom, sister, cousin and two aunts run in the women's five person relay.

The half-marathon always seems to have a strong contingent of female runners with ties to our area and 2014 was no exception.

Ironwood's Carolyn Warren, 25, and Emmy Tuzee, 29, crossed the finish line in second (1:34:58) and third places (1:35:28) respectively.

"I did pretty well," Warren said. "I felt real good until three miles to go. With the sun and the heat, it was a little hard to push it in. I'm not a good heat runner."

Melissa Williams, 37, lives in Chicago, Ill., but she grew up in Iron Belt and ran cross country in Hurley. She likes coming back home and won last year's half-marathon. She took fourth this year in 1:37:53.

Sandra Pera, 53, of Wakefield raced to a seventh place finish (1:47:07) and Ironwood's Paulette Niemi, 46, was eighth (1:51:17) despite running most of the 13.1 miles with a pulled leg muscle.

Dan Stietz, 49, of Dover, Minn. broke the hand-cycle race record in 2013 and he was back again this year looking for a new record in Wisconsin's longest running marathon. It was mission accomplished in 1:24:44.

Stietz said the records keep falling, because he has made changes in his race preparation.

"I have a mentor and coach in Craig Blanchette," Stietz said. "He was a para-Olympian who set 21 world records. He has great knowledge of training, health and diet. The Paavo is very challenging and it can be brutal with the hills. I love it and I hate it. But it's my favorite marathon."

Mike Treder, 29, of Belleville, Wis. won his second men's half-marathon in a row, even though he said he felt "a little lonely" in the midst of hundreds of runners at the Paavo.

"Last year, I was chasing people from the start," Treder said. "I was hoping someone would run with me, but no one did. So I led from the start. It was a little warmer and a little more lonely than last year, so that made it tougher."

"That's two in a row, so I'd like to make this a habit. I enjoy coming up here. I like how people along the way sit at the edge of their driveways and cheer for you. They're very supportive."

Treder's time of 1:20:47 was a little slower than last year's 1:18:51.

Ironwood's Jason Slining, 42, ran his first half-marathon and took an impressive second place finish in 1:22:44.

"I feel great," Slining said. "I felt strong most of the race and I had the first place guy in sight, but I couldn't reel him in. But it was a nice atmosphere to run in."

Other local runners that fared well in the half-marathon were Will Andresen, 53, (5th place-1:28:53) and Andrew Strong, 36, (6th place-1:29:34). Both are from Ironwood although Strong has spent a lot of time working in Japan.

Hurley's Brad Pinard, 38, put up a seventh place finish in 1:31:09 and recent Hurley high school graduate, Brad Vaara, finished 15th in 1:39:26.

Richard Pleet, 73, of Chicago, was the oldest runner in the half-marathons and finished in a very respectable time of 1:56:56.

Some 77 runners competed in the men's half-marathon, while 79 women ran in their half-marathon.

Bob Sejbl of Ironwood was the highest local finisher in the full marathon. He finished in 36th place in 3:59:25.

Sejbl, 69, said, "I'm not quitting now. I had my fastest marathon last year, slowest this year. It was hot and humid out there. I was having trouble with my calf. I almost quit at the 6.5 mile mark because I had 20 miles to go. So I've got to work on the mental part of the race, but I'm not quitting now."

Britta Schroeter of Ironwood was the highest local female finisher. She took 16th in 4:23:44.

Fahrner Construction was the highest local finisher (4th place) in the Men's 5 Person Relay with Jake Chiapuzio, Ken Fahrner, Gerard Lauzon, Tyler Muzzy and Kyle Pallin all running a leg on the relay.

We Run For Food was also the top area team (4th place) in the Women's 5 Person Relay with Hope Bretting and Tori Colassaco of Hurley, Kaylyn King of Gile and Gabby and Kirkie Pecotte of Montreal running in the relay.

In the Mixed 5 Person Relay, the Running Red Devils team of Sam Dean, Eric Fitting, Jessica Gering, Jared Joki and Kari Strand crossed the finish line in second place with a time of 3:09:28. The team has run the Paavo together for more than 10 years with a few changes and substitutions along the way.

ners John Garske, Brian Glodowski, Mike McPherson Sr., Greg Ossanna and Mark Sherman took third in the Men's Masters 5 Person Relay.

In the Women's Masters 5 Person Relay, the Sweet Carolines=Boston Strong team of Enni Gregas, Shelia Gregor, Ginger Kivisto, Debbie Minkin and Judi Yatchak brought home the gold in 4:45:03.

In the Mixed Masters 5 Person Relay, Kuusi Pazzo Lieden (translation needed here) with Matthew and Sue Clausen, David and Melissa DeCarlo and Colette Smith were the top local finishers in fifth place.

Kevin Hopp, 37, and Craig

Rogan, 36, of Stevens Point, Wis. won the Men's 2 Person Relay as the Doc Wetter's Kids team and had some unique perspectives on the marathon.

"We have about 30 people come up and we stay in a cabin off the highway," Hopp said. "We camp out. We had a good race and it got a little hot. But they have such good aid stations here with water, sponges, Gatorade and ice packs. One of the most inspirational things I've seen was a blind woman running with another man. That's the definition of running. I want to meet her and get a picture with her."

wood Area Schools, but he was also an excellent athlete at Luther L. Wright High School, collecting 12 letters in four sports. Only a series of injuries prevented him from increasing that total and possibly playing at a major college or university.

As a senior in 1960-61, Smith was at his best, being a co-captain and leader on the Red Devil football team that had a sparkling 7-1 record and he received scholarship offers from many four-year schools, including Michigan.

Smith said he found out that you don't accomplish anything on your own in life. There is always a parent, teacher, coach or someone else who sees something in you and helps and guides you along the way.

Smith said he always thought his coach and former Michigan football player, Wayne Melchiori, had something to do with the scholarship offer to punt for the Wolverines and he thanked others who helped in his life. One was his wife, Mary, and Smith noted that on the day of his induction, they had first dated 55-years ago.

But Smith was a talented punter. In his senior year, Smith was punting in pre-game warm-ups against Rhinelander. Smith's punts kept landing on the other side of the field where the Rhinelander players were warming up.

The Rhinelander coach got upset with Melchiori and finally told him to have his punter back up and kick from his own end zone.

"He's already kicking from the end zone," Melchiori replied.

Smith had basketball talent and as the senior center and captain on the basketball team, he helped guide the Red Devils to its first Class B regional title in 19-years.

Smith told the audience that if they were from Ironwood, it was important to support and give something back to the community, the Hall of Fame or education. It was Smith who was one of the founding members of the Ironwood Area Sports Hall of Fame. As an educator, he initiated the Ironwood Area Scholarship Foundation, which enables any senior filling out an application to receive a scholarship.

COACH HARRY PETERSON

Harry Peterson finally got the recognition he deserved as a basketball coach.

Coaches with very good players and teams are sometimes over-looked and fans give all the credit to the players. For awhile, Phil Jackson of the NBA heard that any coach could coach players like Michael Jordan and Kobe Bryant and win championships. Later, people came to realize Jackson was one of the best coaches in the NBA.

Ron Trethewey spoke on Peterson's behalf and he noted that Ironwood may have had some of its best teams ever when the Red Devils posted a 59-12 record playing in the very tough Great Northern Conference from 1973-76. Those teams captured two straight Class B regional titles and were the first recipients of the Stephen W. Kleiman Memorial trophy, symbolic of U.P. Class B supremacy.

Although Peterson won Coach-of-the-Year honors in Class B twice, he was never the type of coach or person to call attention to himself.

But Peterson could coach and he was a darned good one. After five years in Rogers City, Peterson spent 20 years as Ironwood's head basketball coach. Not only did he show his coaching longevity, but he also became the all-time winningest coach in school history with a record of 254-159.

Only recently did his former player, Pete Lewinski, go ahead of him in wins at Ironwood.

Trethewey stated that Peterson was a "builder of good teams, not individuals," which was the sign of a good coach.

In typical fashion, Peterson said he felt fortunate to be inducted into the Hall of Fame. He thanked his assistant coaches, who helped make the program a great success and he thanked all the players who played for him over the years. He thanked the fans who came to so many of the games he coached.

But he was most thankful to his family for their support and the many sacrifices they had in a coach's family.

LARRY PASSINT (CLASS OF 1971)

Larry Passint sent out a lot of thank yous in his speech. One of them went to coach Harry Peterson for teaching him a lot about basketball and another was for taking his brother, Randy, out of a game in Gladstone when he had scored 38 points.

"I had the school record of 39," Passint joked.

Passint remembers being around Ironwood athletics at a very young age and met the larger than life John Krznarich at age five. Passint said Krznarich told him he was going to be a batboy in Little League, but never spared any punches, even with five-year olds.

"The next game is Monday at 4:30 and don't be late, knucklehead," Krznarich said.

Passint was a versatile, excellent athlete who had the talent to letter in four sports.

Passint earned all-conference honors as an offensive end, but it was basketball where he made his mark.

He scored 336 points in his career and was named to the Michigan-Wisconsin All-Conference First Team as a senior. He was awarded the Jack Kraemer Memorial Award as the outstanding senior in the M-W conference.

As a freshman guard at Gogebic Community College, Passint averaged 20 points a game and earned Third Team All-Region 13 honors.

Passint continued in sports after college as a coach and referee, but his priorities have changed.

"My championships are now with my family," Passint said.

Passint follows younger brother, Randy, into the Hall of Fame.

JAY SYNKELMA (CLASS OF 1981)

Master of Ceremonies, Tim Kolesar, said Jay Synkelma badly wanted to attend his induction into the IASHOF, but could not because of work-related scheduling problems in Arizona.

It really should not have come as too much of a surprise, because Synkelma's world has always revolved around golf.

Growing up close to the Gogebic Country Club, there was no truth to the story that Synkelma actually slept at the golf course. But he could have been called "a golf nut" in a good sort of way, because he loved the game of golf.

Although Synkelma was an outstanding golfer in his high school years and could break par, there was no formal golf program to show off his talents in his senior year.

With the help of a local committee from the country club, led by Nick Milakovich, Synkelma enrolled at Palm Beach Community College and worked on his golf game.

He helped his golf team to a fifth place finish in the Junior College National Championship in 1984.

Synkelma turned pro in 1990 and qualified for the Nike tour. During his six years on the tour, he had six first place wins and other top 10 finishes.

Synkelma now teaches golf at the Hilton Golf Academy and works out of the Conquistador Country Club in Tucson, Ariz.

1963 IRONWOOD FOOTBALL TEAM

Wayne Melchiori had two undefeated teams during his coaching tenure and it was the 1963 team that surprised everyone (except themselves) with an 8-0 record.

The team scored 183 points, while giving up only 24 (three points per game). The '63 team won the Michigan-

Wisconsin Conference title that year.

And yet the '63 team has been looked upon as the little brother to the big brother 1965 team, Melchiori's other undefeated team. Melchiori said that shouldn't be the case.

"The 1965 team was a powerful team with 60 players and good players at all positions," Melchiori said. "But the '63 team was a wonderful team to coach. They may not have been the best or second-best team I had in Ironwood or good enough to be undefeated, but they were undefeated. They were my favorite team."

Player Bill Bassett said the only real debate before the season was whether the team would finish fourth or fifth in the conference or maybe third.

"But we knew it was all about the team, the team, the team," Bassett said. "The players and coaches all did such an outstanding job in planning, teamwork, discipline, hard work, camaraderie and everything."

"It was fantastic and that's why we went undefeated. I was so proud to represent Ironwood when we went out on the field."

Melchiori said that early in the week of games even the coaches thought the other team had more talented players, but the Red Devil players would have none of it.

"They would always ask, 'What can we do to win?'" Melchiori said. "We all pulled together and we never had any problems."

"I was really proud of that team. The '63 team turned out to be one strong team and it was the only team I had that kicked a field goal."

MORE AWARDS

Tony White was also presented an Award of Recognition as the 2014 Fan of the Year before the induction ceremony began.

Bessemer volleyball starts Wednesday

BESSEMER — Bessemer volleyball practice for girls in grades 9 through 12 starts Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. in the high school gym.

Call Shelly at 906-842-3345 or Lori at 906-364-1315 with questions.

Rodgers sits as Packers lose to Titans

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mike McCarthy wanted to get work for Matt Flynn, Scott Tolzien and Chase Rettig in Green Bay's preseason opener. The Packers coach already knows what he has in Aaron Rodgers.

McCarthy scratched Rodgers along with nine other Packers, and Rettig wound up playing all but two snaps in the fourth quarter as Green Bay lost to the Tennessee Titans 20-16 on Saturday night.

"Aaron's situation of not playing was more about us having four quarterbacks," McCarthy said. "Historically, I feel like I didn't do a good job of getting the fourth quarterback reps, so we made a point to make sure our young players had the whole fourth quarter."

"I feel like Aaron's had an excellent camp and a phenomenal spring. He would have played one series tonight, so it was really about getting Chase the work in the whole quarter."

Lions' offense quiet in win over Browns

DETROIT (AP) — Matthew Stafford's appearance was brief, and Calvin Johnson didn't play at all.

So if Detroit fans were hoping to see what the Lions' new offense is capable of, they'll have to keep waiting. "We have a lot of different looks and a lot of different plays that we can show the opposing defense," Stafford said. "You didn't see a lot of that tonight, because we barely gameplanned for this game at all, so there weren't a lot of the things that we will have in the regular season."

Bi-racial relationship touchy subject for father

Dear Annie: I am the mother of a biracial child. My son's father, "Derek," and I are not currently together, as he resides some distance away, but we visit often so Derek and our son can have a relationship. Ultimately, we would like to be together.

Annie's Mailbox

The problem is my father. He is not, and never has been, a fan of interracial dating.

Over the past five years, he has come to accept his grandson, but on more than one occasion, he has expressed his "disgust" and "disapproval" of the relationship I have with Derek, even using the "n" word.

I have zero tolerance for this.

My father doesn't have to like Derek, and I've never tried to force a relationship between them.

But he needs to respect that I'm an adult, and regardless of whether Derek and I are together, I am going to encourage him to have a healthy relationship with our son.

How do I get my father to understand this and, in the meantime, allow him to have a relationship with his grandchild when he harbors such ignorance and animosity? —Stuck

Dear Stuck: Hopefully, your father's attitude will become more enlightened the more attached he becomes to his grandson. Nonetheless, the way to deal with Dad is to set boundaries. Do not permit him to denigrate Derek in front of your child or you. If he does so, leave the premises immediately, not in anger, but out of necessity, saying, "Sorry, Dad, but I will not tolerate such remarks." Be consistent and firm. You can train Dad how to behave whether he agrees or not.

Dear Annie: I have three grandchildren, two of whom seem to love me and want to spend time with me. But my son's daughter recently graduated middle school, and I wasn't invited. She said she thought I might embarrass her.

The reason for this is because I say things like, "Please be careful if you are going somewhere I feel may not be safe." She thinks I'm being racist, because some of those areas are inner-city neighborhoods. I mean no disrespect by this, but still would not go to an undesirable part of town at night regardless of who lives there.

I also told my grandkids that I would give them $5,000 if they graduated high school with all Bs or better. Unfortunately, the two older kids didn't make it, but the youngest one is very bright and on track. But I now plan on revoking that offer because I'm not sure I want to spend so much money on a child who doesn't welcome me at her graduation. Am I justified or not? —California Grandma

Dear Grandma: It's your money. You can do whatever you like with it. And she should have invited you to her graduation. But while we know you are concerned and caring, you also sound rather controlling. Is the gift for grades or behavior? Will you change it every time she does something you don't like? And you mean well, but protecting her from unsafe areas is her parents' job. Your warnings are likely what she hears from her folks all the time, so you are coming across as a scold. She's 13 and in full teenage mode. You'll get better results if you back off.

Dear Annie: "Old Friend" didn't indicate whether she missed the funeral out of choice or due to lack of information. She said she had not been in touch with the deceased in months.

This past year, I missed the funeral of a dear friend's mother. We always sat together at family dinners, and my lack of presence was noted. But the reason I didn't attend is that when calls were made regarding the funeral, I was inadvertently left off the list. It was an oversight. I would have been there had I known. The family felt sad that I missed it, but they were not critical. —S.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

EUGENIA LAST

Your Birthday Monday, August 11, 2014

If you have faith and confidence, you will be able to handle all the demands and responsibilities you face. Expecting too much from others will not give you the rewards you are seeking. Believe that you can make a difference, and others will believe in you too.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) —Don't lag when it comes to important paperwork. You will find shortcuts as well as interesting options that will be beneficial legally, financially or contractually. Channel your energy wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) —Emotionally charged issues will develop if you are overly sensitive to what others say. Seek an objective opinion from someone you trust. Getting the facts straight will eliminate misunderstandings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) —It's impossible to reach a decision if uncertainty prevails. Don't be coerced by anyone who puts pressure on you to make a move. Stay put until you know you are making the right choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) —Continue moving forward. You will gain satisfaction if you complete unfinished business. Enlist help from people who have the means and knowledge to help you reach your goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) —Travel will give you insight into a dilemma. A financial investment isn't likely to turn in your favor. You can make headway if you keep your plans a secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) —Be assertive. You can get what you want if you are persistent. You need to make your voice heard if you wish to win support for your latest venture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) —Letting criticism get to you will cause you to doubt your abilities. Someone with an ulterior motive will try to prevent you from getting ahead. Put what you have to offer on display.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) —Money is in the picture. A contract, gift, settlement or financial opportunity is present. Use this chance to make an advantageous move. Present and promote an idea to someone influential.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) —You may end up as a mediator during a family disagreement. Be diplomatic and try to find a solution that everyone can be happy with. Now is not the time to take sides.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) —Someone is likely to disappoint you. Don't let anything get you down. Present your plans in order to make progress. Help will arrive from an unexpected source.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) —Maintain focus, or you could be sidelined by someone trying to manipulate you. It's important to highlight your strong points when marketing your assets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) —You will face some delays and frustrations. Don't give in —an alternative route will get you where you want to go. It's the journey, not the destination, that counts.

Ask Doctor K

By Anthony L. Komaroff, M.D.

DEAR DOCTOR K: Every month I have awful PMS. Can you suggest drug-free ways to relieve my symptoms? DEAR READER: Premenstrual syndrome (PMS) is a collection of symptoms that occur just before and during menstruation. The most common symptom is unusual mood swings. In addition, women with PMS also experience irritability, anxiety, depression, headaches, hot flashes, bloating, abdominal cramping, breast tenderness and food cravings. Diet and lifestyle strategies can help alleviate some symptoms of PMS: HEAT. Apply heat (a heating pad, hot water bottle or a hot shower) to your stomach or back to temporarily relieve pain. AVOID SKIPPING MEALS. Regular meals and snacks help maintain a balanced mood and better energy level. Pair carbohydrates with protein or fat to help you feel full longer. Eat an apple with peanut butter, low-fat cheese with crackers or vegetables with hummus. INCREASE YOUR CALCIUM INTAKE. Women who get at least 1,000 milligrams of calcium a day have fewer PMS symptoms compared with women who do not get the recommended calcium intake. Good food sources of calcium include low-fat dairy products, canned salmon, kale and bok choy. WATCH YOUR CAFFEINE INTAKE. Caffeine may increase moodiness and anxiety. LIMIT SALTY FOODS. Excess salt can worsen bloating and weight gain. GET ENOUGH B VITAMINS. Women who get more of the B vitamins thiamine and riboflavin from their food are less likely to have PMS. Good food sources of these B vitamins include sunflower seeds, beans, oats, dairy products, dark green vegetables and eggs. MANAGE YOUR STRESS. Stress can increase the number and severity of PMS symptoms. To relieve stress, exercise regularly, or try yoga. ACUPUNCTURE. There is limited but promising evidence that acupuncture can help relieve menstrual pain. INDULGE IN A LITTLE CHOCOLATE. Many women crave chocolate around their periods. If you do, choose dark chocolate, which has less sugar, over milk chocolate. Mild PMS is common. Talk to your doctor if you experience severe symptoms. These include: -- Inability to carry out your usual daily activities. -- Symptoms that interfere with your relationships. -- Sudden onset of new PMS symptoms or increase in severity. PMS is one of those many conditions that some doctors ignore or dismiss, either because it is not life-threatening, or because there are no diagnostic tests or objective abnormalities when the doctor performs a physical examination. Some doctors are frustrated when a patient says she has a symptom, yet the doctor has no way of objectively verifying it. Such an attitude is unfortunate. PMS produces very real suffering for millions of women. There are drug-free ways that can help alleviate the symptoms. Dr. Komaroff is a physician and professor at Harvard Medical School. # As probe begins, Stewart steps away from the track CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP) — The collision was as common as any in racing. Kevin Ward Jr.'s car spun twice like a top, wheels hugging the wall, before it plopped backward on the dimly lit dirt track.

In a sport steeped with bravado, what happened next was another familiar, but treacherous, move: Wearing a black fire-suit and black helmet, the 20-year-old Ward unbuckled himself, climbed out of the winged car into the night and defiantly walked onto the track at Canandaigua Motorsports Park. He gestured, making his disgust evident with the driver who triggered the wreck with a bump: three-time NASCAR champion Tony Stewart.

Ward, a relative unknown compared to NASCAR's noted swashbuckler, was nearly hit by another passing car as he pointed with his right arm in Stewart's direction. As he confronted Stewart in his passing car, disaster struck.

Ward was standing to the right of Stewart's familiar No. 14 car, which seemed to fishtail from the rear and hit him. According to video and witness accounts, Ward's body was sucked underneath the car and hurtled through the air before landing on his back as fans looked on in horror.

Ward was killed. Stewart, considered one of the most proficient drivers in racing, dropped out of Sunday's NASCAR race at Watkins Glen, hours after Saturday's crash. And the sport was left reeling from a tragedy that could have ripple effects from the biggest stock car series down to weekend dirt track racing.

"There aren't words to describe the sadness I feel about the accident that took the life of Kevin Ward Jr.," Stewart said in a statement.

Authorities questioned the 43-year-old Stewart once on Saturday night and went to Watkins Glen to talk to him again Sunday. They described him as "visibly shaken" after the crash and said he was cooperative.

On Sunday, Ontario County Sheriff Philip Povero said that investigators also don't have any evidence at this point in the investigation to support criminal intent. But he also said that criminal charges have not been ruled out.

The crash raised several questions: Will Ward's death cause drivers to think twice about on-track confrontations? Did Stewart try and send his own message by buzzing Ward, the young driver, only to have his risky move turn fatal? Or did Ward simply take his life into his own hands by stepping into traffic in a black firesuitsuit on a dark track?

The only one who may have that answer is Stewart.

David S. Weinstein, a former state and federal prosecutor in Miami who is now in private practice, said it would be difficult to prove criminal intent.

"I think even with the video, it's going to be tough to prove that this was more than just an accident and that it was even culpable negligence, which he should've known or should've believed that by getting close to this guy, that it was going to cause the accident," he said.

The sheriff renewed a plea for spectators to turn over photos and videos of the crash. Investigators were reconstructing the accident and looking into everything from the dim lighting on a portion of the track to how muddy it was, as well as if Ward's dark firesuit played a role in his death, given the conditions.

Driver Cory Sparks, a friend of Ward's, was a few cars back when Ward was killed.

"The timing was unsafe," he said of Ward's decision to get out of his car to confront Stewart. "When your adrenaline is going, and you're taken out of a race, your emotions flare."

It's often just a part of racing. Drivers from mild-mannered Jeff Gordon to ladylike Danica Patrick have erupted in anger on the track at another driver. The confrontations are part of the sport's allure: Fans love it and cheer wildly from the stands. Stewart, who has a reputation for being a hothead nicknamed "Smoke," once wound up like a pitcher and tossed his helmet like a fastball at Matt Kenseth's windshield.

"I've seen it many times in NASCAR, where a driver will confront the other one, and a lot of times they'll try to speed past them. And that's what it appeared to me as if what Tony Stewart did, he tried to speed past Ward," witness Michael Messerly said. "And the next thing I could see, I didn't see Ward any more. It just seemed like he was suddenly gone."

The crash also raised questions about whether Stewart will continue with his hobby of racing on small tracks on the side of the big-money NASCAR races. He has long defended his participation in racing on tracks like the one where the crash happened, even as accidents and injury have put his day job in NASCAR at risk.

Saturday's crash came almost exactly a year after Stewart suffered a compound fracture to his right leg in a sprint car race in Iowa. The injury cost him the second half of the NASCAR season and sidelined him during NASCAR's important Chase for the Sprint Cup Championship. Stewart only returned to sprint track racing last month.

The crash site is the same track where Stewart was involved in a July 2013 accident that seriously injured a 19-year-old driver. He later took responsibility for his car making contact with another and triggering the 15-car accident that left Alysha Ruggles with a compression fracture in her back.

"Everybody has hobbies," he said last month, adding that "there are a lot of other things I could be doing that are a lot more dangerous and a lot bigger waste of time with my time off do than doing that."

Greg Zipadelli, competition director for Stewart-Haas Racing, said Stewart felt strongly he should not race after the wreck. Regan Smith replaced him in his car.

"We're racing with heavy hearts," Smith said.

McIlroy wins PGA in thrilling show

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The challenge finally arrived for Rory McIlroy, and he was better than ever Sunday to win the PGA Championship.

On a back nine filled with clutch shots and as much tension as a major can provide, McIlroy emerged from a four-man race to outlast Phil Mickelson and the darkness at Valhalla to capture his second straight major.

McIlroy closed with a 3-under 68 and became only the fourth player in the last century of golf to win four majors at 25 or younger. The others were Tiger Woods, Jack Nicklaus and Bobby Jones, three of the game's greatest players.

Boy Wonder appears on his way to belonging in that group.

"I didn't think in my wildest dreams I'd have a summer like this," said McIlroy, only the seventh player to win the last two majors of the year. "I played the best golf of my life. I really gutted it out today."

But one of the greatest shows on soggy turf came with a most peculiar ending.

Three shots behind going to the back nine, McIlroy rallied to take the lead and then hit a 9-iron from the fairway bunker to 10 feet for birdie on the 17th hole for a two-shot lead going to the par-5 18th. Because of a two-hour rain delay earlier, darkness was falling quickly and it wasn't certain McIlroy would be able to finish.

McIlroy was allowed to hit his tee shot before Mickelson and Rickie Fowler had reached their drives. Both were only two shots behind, still in the game. McIlroy came within a yard of hitting in a hazard right of the fairway.

Then, the PGA of America allowed McIlroy to hit his second shot. Mickelson and Fowler had to stand to the side of the green.

"We were cool with hitting the tee shot," Fowler said. "We weren't expecting the approach shots."

Fowler had a 50-foot eagle attempt to tie for the lead. He was well off the mark, and missed the short birdie putt attempt that cost him his third straight runner-up finish in a major. Mickelson was short of the green, and his chip came within inches of dropping for an eagle that would have tied him for the lead.

Mickelson appeared upset that they had to wait to finish the hole — not standard procedure in a PGA Tour event — and he made two references in a TV interview that this is the only championship the PGA of America runs all year.

"It didn't affect the outcome of the championship at all, I don't think," Mickelson said. "It's not what we normally do. It's not a big deal either way."

Mickelson closed with a 66 and was runner-up for the ninth time in a major.

Fowler became the first player in history to finish in the top five at all four majors without winning one. He closed with a 68 and tied for third with Henrik Stenson, who fell out of a share of the lead by missing a 3-foot par putt on the 14th hole. Stenson shot a 66.

McIlroy hit his second shot into a bunker, and he had to two-putt from 35 feet for the win. He lagged the first one to tap-in range, and the major was his.

McIlroy repeatedly pumped his fist before letting out a scream above the gallery that had been treated to one of the best shows ever in a major.

He won his first two majors by eight shots at the 2011 U.S. Open and 2012 PGA Championship. Only a month ago, McIlroy took a six-shot lead into the final round of the British Open and completed a wire-to-wire win with only a brief scare.

This was his first big test, and it took some of his best golf to come through.

"I think I showed a lot of guts out there to get the job done," he said.

The winning shot turned out to be that 9-iron from the bunker and the birdie putt on the 17th hole that gave him a two-shot lead, the largest margin for anyone on a day when as many as five players claimed a share of the lead.

It might not have been possible without a 3-wood on the par-5 10th hole.

Standing in the fairway, McIlroy watched Fowler drain a 30-foot birdie putt to take the outright lead. McIlroy was 281 yards away, slightly uphill, and his short caught the left side of the fairway and rolled onto the green before stopping 7 feet away for an eagle that got him back in the game.

Mickelson holed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 11th hole to tie Fowler, and it looked to be his day when he rolled in a 30-foot par putt on the 12th. Stenson hit a bold shot to the island-green 13th for a short birdie to tie for the lead, only to fall back.

McIlroy caught the leaders with a birdie on the 13th.

None of the other contenders made another birdie the rest of the way until it was too late.

All that was left after an exhausting day of raw emotions was the coronation. Not since Woods in 2008 has anyone won three straight tournaments, and they were big ones for McIlroy — the British Open, a World Golf Championship and the PGA Championship. He played them in a combined 48-under par.

"He's better than everyone else right now," Mickelson said.

Tigers lose in 19 innings; KC moves within 1/2 game

TORONTO (AP) — They were drained and depleted after Sunday's 19-inning loss, but the Detroit Tigers can't afford to ease up. Their lead atop the AL Central is dwindling fast.

Jose Bautista's single in the 19th inning drove home the winning run as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied from a 5-0 deficit to beat the Tigers 6-5.

Coupled with Kansas City's seventh straight win, a 7-4 victory over San Francisco, Detroit's lead in the division has been shaved to a half-game.

"We're still in first place, that's all that matters," Detroit left-hander David Price said. "It doesn't matter if we win the division by 15 games or if we win it by one game."

The Tigers have gone 2-5 on their current road trip after sweeping Colorado to start August. After using eight pitchers Sunday, and putting two more on the 15-day disabled list, their staff is in rough shape.

"We're going to have to do some shuffling," manager Brad Ausmus acknowledged. "Other than (Justin) Verlander pitching tomorrow, I can't tell you anything."

the 19th and advanced to third when second baseman Ian Kinsler couldn't field an errant throw from Porcello on Jose Reyes' sacrifice bunt. Cabrera was intentionally walked to load the bases for Bautista, who ended it with a single to right over the drawn-in outfield, sending his teammates streaming out of the dugout in celebration.

Porcello, who threw 110 pitches over seven innings against the Yankees on Thursday, and tossed a 30-pitch bullpen session Saturday, worked two-plus innings out of the bullpen as the Tigers used eight pitchers.

Porcello called the grounds crew out to work on the mound in the 17th because he was struggling with his landing spot on the well-worn dirt.

"The holes were so big," Porcello said. "I couldn't really get any kind of footing, I was falling on every pitch. There was nowhere to move around on the rubber. It was one big crater."

Led by a six-inning stint from Chad Jenkins (1-1), Toronto's bullpen threw 15 2/3 innings of scoreless relief. The Blue Jays also used eight pitchers.

Aggressive Brewers fall to Dodgers, Kershaw 5-1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Brewers took their chances on the base paths trying to break through against one of the game's best pitchers.

It worked just once on Sunday, not nearly enough times to beat Clayton Kershaw.

The left-handed ace allowed six hits in an eight-inning outing that qualified as a subpar effort for the two-time Cy Young Award winner, and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Milwaukee 5-1 to avoid a three-game sweep in a matchup of NL divisional leaders.

"I think anytime you face a pitcher like Kershaw, if you try to just get stagnant, I don't think much is going to happen," manager Ron Roenicke said.

Kershaw (14-2) lowered his league-leading ERA to 1.78 and tied for the National League lead in victories. Adrian Gonzalez drove in two runs, and scored the go-ahead run in the fifth off Jimmy Nelson (2-3).

Kershaw allowed a run and two walks with six strikeouts. He allowed leadoff hitters to reach base in four of the first five innings but benefited from a couple baserunning mistakes and failed aggressive play by the Brewers.

In the third, Nelson wasted his leadoff double after getting tagged out trying to advance from second on a grounder by Carlos Gomez. Later, Gomez was picked off first.

Rickie Weeks hit a leadoff double in fifth. Two batters later, Jean Segura popped up a squeeze attempt caught by a charging Kershaw in front of the plate. He threw to third to easily double off Weeks.
