IRONWOOD – A Fremont, Wis., educator is saying the outcome of a hearing on special education rules should be to recognize that school districts are underfunded.

The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction will conduct a public hearing on Dec. 20 in Madison, to accept public testimony on proposal permanent rules related to clarifying high-cost special education aid. The proposed rule seeks to provide clarity in determining costs for providing special education-related services to a child for the purpose of recouping high-cost special education aid.

The proposed rules clarify language with determining non-administrative special education costs and services to children that are district general costs for all students. The changes also define federal Medicaid benefits for special education, determine how equipment and other capital costs compare to the previous school year, and distinguish the $50,000 special education threshold cost from other funding.

Ken Kastendieck, the agency administrator for the Cooperative Educational Service Agency No. 12 (CESA 12), said he and Jennifer Ledin, the CESA 12 director of the Center for Special Education and Pupil Service, will have discussions with local legislators and area school district superintendents to discuss the proposed rule changes.

CESA 12 serves northern Wisconsin school districts along with the Wisconsin Rural Schools Alliance.

“We are going to make sure that we have accurate information before going in there,” Kastendieck said. “We want to know who we’re at risk for and who exactly who benefits and who doesn’t.

“The outcome should not be that CESA 12 doesn’t advocate just for the school districts that would by hurt at the cost of the school districts that would benefit,” he said. “The common denominator is that special education is underfunded, he said.

“The issue that would be very helpful with us if they would fund special ed at the rate they would fund K-12,” Kastendieck said. “It’s not fair. It cannot be funded at the rate it should be funded and it’s not as close as we can.”

School districts are facing many challenges with special education and with the mental health economies, especially, he said. What is happening is a back and forth of resources between schools, social services, private health care and hospitals back and forth of resources said. The discussions have always been happening, but it’s the final numbers in the budget that are most severe results in earlier ages who are very involved, of course the mental health component is huge for us,” Kastendieck said. “In our region we don’t have the people who are qualified to provide the services that we need.

Schools appreciate the additional funding but sometimes it doesn’t come close to the actual costs associated with running a program, said KevinGenisot, the Hurley School District administrator and director of special education. There are many variables within the special education department and Genisot said he’s “curious to see the results” but is not optimistic about a positive impact for Hurley School District.

Hurley City Council receives audit report

MCHELSON – The Hurley City Council on Thursday approved its 2018 audit report.

Bob Gamache, a partner with Wipfli LLC, presented the audit results on behalf of the accounting firm. He said the $5.26 million revenue and expenditures for 2017 appear significantly higher than the $5.4 million in 2016 because of approximately $335,000 in capital projects.

Gamache said the city’s expenditures did not exceed revenues over all for 2017. However, the public works department overran its capital and development service expedites did exceed actual budgets.

Gamache recommended changes to transfer between various funds. He said the city is maintaining a positive unreserved balance that should provide enough operating fund balances that requires grants and loans for large projects.

The council approved a Finance committee recommendation to change the 2019 auditing services to WRP LLC. The fee for service was $38,000.

Alderman Jaimie Francis asked for all to provide audit reports well in advance of meetings in order to review and bring questions to the presentation to the council.

Max Samardich, the new officer with the Hurley Police Department, was introduced at the meeting. He was raised in Bessemer and attended the Community College before graduating from the police academy at Nicolet Area Technical College in Scituate.

The Pentagon is considering reducing the number of troops in Afghanistan, including one that would shelter Afghan civilians to help stem a potential counterterrorism mission, the top U.S. military officer told Congress on Wednesday.

Gen. Mark Milley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, did not disclose any plans, but he agreed that closing a monitoring and training mission in Afghanistan to halt threats is a potential move.

“We have multiple options and we are looking at all of them,” Milley said. “The U.S. has currently announced 3,500 troops in Afghanistan. About 3,500 of them are doing counterterrorism missions. The remainder of the core of the broader NATO mission to train and assist Afghan security forces is about 12,000.”

Military chiefs for six NATO countries and the unified national military planning committee met with Milley Tuesday.

Earlier this week, a Washington Post report disclosed thousands of pages of unclassified cables over 18 years of U.S. intelligence overseas, showing that government officials for years misled the public about failures in the Afghan war.

Report: Weinstein reaches tentative $25 million deal with accusers

New York (AP) — Harvey Weinstein’s lawyers and accusers have reached a tentative $25 million settlement that would end nearly every sexual misconduct lawsuit brought against him and his company, The New York Times reported Wednesday.

The Times cited a half-dozen lawyers in its report, some of whom spoke about the proposed terms on the condition of anonymity.

More than 30 accusers and former Weinstein employees, who said the move was motivated by accusers ranging from sexual misconduct to rape, have agreed to the deal, according to the lawyers.

Weinstein would avoid pleading guilty to any of his money and he would not be required to admit any wrongdoing as part of the final plan. Companies representing the Weinstein Company would cover the settlement’s cost, the Times reported.

Representatives for Weinstein did not comment to the Times.

The proposed settlement has gotten preliminary approval from the major parties involved. It would require court approval and a final audit before moving forward.

The settlement’s terms were not yet finalized. Signatures of the alleged victims would split $6.2 million into several tranches.

One of 14 accusers would get $2 million and another $2 million in a second year. One of 14 accusers would get $2.8 million, one of two accusers would get $2 million, one of three accusers would get $1.3 million, and four accusers would get $1.3 million, the Times reported.

Actress Katherine Kendall, 50, said she agreed to the terms of the settlement because she did not want to see others plaintiffs tiffs from receiving recompense.

“I don’t love it, but I don’t know how to go after them,” she told the Times. “I don’t know what I can really do.”

Weinstein was scheduled to be tried on rape and sexual assault charges on Nov. 5. He pleaded guilty to charges of sexual misconduct to rape, have agreed to the terms of the settlement. He was a former studio executive and his career was destroyed by #MeToo.

MADRID (AP) — Thomas Bach said Wednesday that the Tokyo Olympics will be “Time Person of the Year.”

“Tokyo is going to be an Olympic Games in history,” Bach said in a press conference of the International Olympic Committee that was broadcast live on Spanish television.

Bach said the Games were important because of their impact on people’s lives, especially after two years of uncertainty due to the coronavirus pandemic.

“Tokyo is going to be an Olympic Games that is going to change the course of our lives,” he said.

Bach also said the Games will be a symbol of hope and a source of inspiration for the world.

“Tokyo is going to be an Olympic Games that will inspire people to keep fighting,” he said.

The Tokyo Olympics, which were postponed for a year due to the pandemic, are scheduled to begin on July 23. They will be the first Olympic Games held in Japan.

Bach said the Games will be a chance to celebrate the resilience of athletes and their perseverance in the face of adversity.

“I think it will be a moment where people will see the true beauty of sports,” he said.

Bach also announced that the Games will have a strong focus on sustainability and reducing their carbon footprint.

“Tokyo is going to be an Olympic Games that is going to be a catalyst for change,” he said.

The Games’ sustainability efforts include using renewable energy sources and reducing waste.

Bach said he was confident that the Games would be a success and would bring joy to people around the world.

“I think that is going to be the message of the Games,” he said.

Dear Annie:
The letter you printed from an ignorant band is pitiful. Bands don’t write letters like this one. Your job is to get someone else to write a letter that serves a purpose. As a busy father and my agency’s top executive, I was told not to write that letter. I doubt she knows it.

I wish I could tell her how much I loved her. I am truly sorry for your loss. She will be missed through the media that I understood how much I loved her. I am truly sorry for your loss.

— Ignorant Husband

Dear Ignorant Husband: Ignorant husbands don’t write letters like this one. Your letter serves no purpose. Write a letter that serves a purpose. As a busy father and my agency’s top executive, I was told not to write this letter. I doubt she knows it. Dear Annie:

I was a lousy husband. Not because of physical or emotional abuse but because of ignorance. I grew up in a household where I never heard my father tell my mother he loved her: I never heard him give her a compliment or ask her opinion. He was a hard worker and a good provider: he bought whatever she needed, never nagged for anything. She just enjoyed it. I just enjoyed it. I guess you can say we were just not a family. We were three people, living in the same house, doing what we were supposed to do. I married her in the same way. She didn’t complain. She came from the same kind of family. She was an angel; she deserved much better. It wasn’t until she passed and I read along with her into the media that I understood how ignorant I was and how hard I was to her. I wish I could tell her how much I loved her and that I am truly sorry.

Dear Dean O’Fer: You are bringing attention to other husbands and spouses who might be doing the same thing in different ways but want to change. Thank you for sharing your story and expressing how much you loved your wife. I have no doubt she knows it.

Dear Dean O’Fer, you are printing from a “Stressed-Out Student,” who had no idea that subject to pursue in nursing, really struck a chord with me. Your advice to attend the career counseling office was spot-on. A proper career counseling office will give the student professional options, which will give him or her a good idea what careers would be suitable for them.

I am truly always thought of this type of work should be mandatory in the final year of high school. As the end of academic year, after graduating from high school, students generally are expected to go into college or vocational school, but they have never had an opportunity to experience the world and find out for themselves who they really are and what they really like. Students pick a career after high school that is totally inappropriate for their lives. In the best-case scenario, this simply wastes the time until they get stuck. However, in too many cases, this can lead to financial and psychological problems. This is really serious. I am sure we can afford to educate our children to the high school level, then easily we can afford to help them go to the next stage in their lives by giving them this career counseling assistance.

US stocks notch modest gains as Fed leaves rates unchanged

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street closed higher on Thursday with modest gains for the week after a volatile losing streak for S&P 500.

The market shook off a volatile start after the Federal Reserve announced it would leave benchmark rates unchanged this month and signaled that it expects to leave them alone in 2020. The central bank has been expected to leave its benchmark interest rate unchanged this month after lowering it three times this year in a bid to shield the economy from slowing global growth and a deterioration of U.S. trade relations.

Investors jostle over whether the U.S. and China will be able to agree on a new escalation in their trade war that has hit shipping this week, pulling major indexes lower.

Wall Street is hoping that both sides can avoid a new tariff battle that tariff-induced kicks to kick on Sunday in China and Europe, including phones, laptops and other high-tech products.

We’re in a wait-and-see mode going into Friday to see if we have any more clarity on the trade talks that go into effect on Sunday,” says azad, a portfolio manager at Global Commerce.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average bounced back after being slightly lower most of the day. It was up 25.8 points, or 0.1%, to 27,911.06. The S&P 500 gained 3.78 points, or 0.1%, to 3,141.65. The Nasdaq composite added 37.87 points, or 0.4%, to 8,654.05. The dollar fell to 108.51 yen.

Some companies made surprising losses. Gillette’s earnings fell. Gillette said its second-quarter results were hurt by softer demand for personal care products in Europe and the U.S. The company said it was raising prices.

Gold rose $6.80 to settle at $1,476.40. The U.S. government sold 3% of the $12 billion in 30-year debt, which has a yield of 2.79%. The dollar fell to 108.51 yen. The euro was at $1.1096.

The benchmark oil price for February delivery was up 1.4% after the energy company reported a $1.1 billion loss for the quarter.

The S&P 500 remained up 25.3% this year. The Dow is up less than 10%.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed up 25.8 points, or 0.1%, to 27,911.06.

Arkansas temporarily halted from enforcing meat-labeling law

Little Rock, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge in Arkansas halted enforcement of a law that bars using terms such as “burger” or “sausage” to sell vegetable-based products in Arkansas temporarily halted from enforcing a law that bars using terms such as “burger” or “sausage” to sell vegetable-based products.

U.S. District Judge Kristine Baker granted a preliminary injunction preventing the state from enforcing the law against a California-based company that makes plant-based meat products.

The American Civil Liberties Union, the California-based Compassion and the Animal Legal Defense Fund sued in July on behalf of the company, and argued that the law is unconstitutional.
